Nurse-Specialist Bill Clears First Step

Multi-million dollar legislation to improve career opportunities for Service nurses and medical specialists was passed by the House on 27 February and was on its way to the Senate as THE JOURNAL went to press.

Early hearings on the proposal (HR 2460) are expected to be called by the Senate Armed Services Committee.

The measure will cost approximately $6.7 million over the next five years and will permit the Army, Navy and Air Force to promote more than 1800 Regular officers to higher permanent grades. Seventeen will be given eagles during the five-year period; 207 will win silver oak leaves and 1,580 will win gold oak leaves. (For complete promotion plans, see THE JOURNAL, 23 Feb.)

The purpose of the proposal is to increase career opportunities for Regular officers serving in the Army Nurse Corps.

Aid For Lawyers

The need to make careers more attractive for military legal officers is being pointed up by Senator Strom Thurmond (D-SC).

Senator Thurmond, a Brigadier General in the Army Reserve, has introduced legislation (THE JOURNAL, 16 February) to authorize accelerated promotion and increased pay for Service lawyers.

Specifically, his proposal (S. 1165) gives the lawyer-officer, who secured his legal education prior to military service, a three-year service credit for pay and promotion purposes. This is designed to compensate for the time which the officer spent in law school and which prevented him from entering on a military career earlier.

THE MEASURE ALSO PROVIDES for accelerated promotion to the rank of captain in the Army and Air Force and to lieutenant in the Navy, after the first anniversary of the officer's admission to practice.

The bill provides for incentive or special pay for Armed Forces lawyers on a

MAJ. WILLIAM R. STANTON, USAF, introduces his young son, William R. (Turbl), jr., 16 months old, to the YC-97J Turbofreighter. Major Stanton, Chief of Operations for the Military Air Transport Service's 1700th Test Squadron at Kelly Air Force Base, recently logged his 10,000th flying hour. This just about equals the time young "Turbl" (who received his nickname for the turbo-prop aircraft) has spent on the earth.

Pay Bill Fate Due By Ides Of March

The fate of the military pay bill—its estimated cost is about $575 million—will be decided at the Pentagon within the next two weeks.

This was made known by Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson at a news conference on 26 February.

He spoke after a final meeting of the Cordier Committee, not announced publicly, had been held at the Pentagon. It is reliably reported that the Committee reached agreement at this session and instructed staff aides to pursue completion of the official report for the Secretary.

Mr. Wilson apparently is not yet ready to endorse an immediate legislative pay request to Capitol Hill, although it is known and has been reported that the Services were asked to submit detailed comments on the draft of a new military pay bill last month.

At his news conference, the Secretary was asked:

"Mr. Wilson, the Defense Department has no real intention of seeking to implement these pay-for-merit proposals of the Cordier Committee this year, have they, by asking any special legislation of money?"

To this question, Secretary Wilson replied:

"I am going to have more to say about the Cordier business shortly, and by that I mean within the next two or three

Ft. Rucker Shows Army Way To Use Aviation For Modernized Forward Push

U. S. ARMY AVIATION CENTER
U. S. ARMY AVIATION SCHOOL
FORT RUCKER, ALA.

CENTERED in this 65,000 acres of rolling coastal land in south central Alabama is the heart of Army Aviation. From the air one hears the constant throb of engines, day and night, from both fixed wing and helicopter aircraft, training new pilots to fill the Army's growing needs and testing new doctrines and tactics designed to add the air's pathways to the Army's means of achieving its objectives.

Everyone here is aware of what Army aviation can add to its combat forces' ability to go forward. They know, for everyone here is a dedicated volunteer who has selected this path of achievement, that aviation is opening new fields for Army forces. When the high command talks of greater mobility for the Army, the only new vista they can see is through the air. Rail, bus, or truck, they point out, can add only a few miles per hour at the utmost through increased development and efficiency. If mobility is to be boosted appreciably it will have to be through the air.

The fact is that the Army's integral aviation has increased in importance probably faster than the Army's ability to appreciate and absorb it. There is a great need now, which the School here is gearing itself to fulfill, for a technical understanding on the command and staff level of what the Army's own aviation can do for its forces. There is a great need to show the Army the height of technical achievement it can reach if it

THIRD ARMY STORY

The Army announced 28 Feb. plans to organize an Air Transportable Atomic Support Command at Ft. Bragg, N. C., and a Medium Atomic Support Command at Ft. Hood, Tex.

Patterned after the Southern European Task Force at Verona, Italy, the new commands will be equipped with Honest John Rockets and Corporal guided missiles.

The forthcoming activation of the power-laden atomic command at Ft. Bragg adds another "first" to the Third Army, under Lt. Gen. Thomas F. Hickey, USA, which is now directing the test of the experimental "Pentomic" 101st Airborne Division at Ft. Campbell, Ky., under Maj. Gen. Thomas L. Shernburne, USA.

A member of THE JOURNAL staff recently visited Third Army Headquarters at Ft. McPherson, Ga., to discuss with General Hickey latest developments in his command. This story on Page 11 follows publication in last week's issue of THE JOURNAL of an article by Maj. Gen. Herbert B. Powell, USA, Commanding General of the Infantry Center at Ft. Benning, Ga., on how atomic warfare requirements are changing Infantry instruction and tactics.

Next week's issue of THE JOURNAL will carry further reports on activities in the Third Army.

Six Month Accord Reached For Guard

All new recruits, under the age of 26, who enter the Army Reserve or Army National Guard after 1 January 1958 will be required to train for six months on active duty.

The decision — which permits the Guard to give enlistees 11 weeks of training in the interim months—was disclosed in a memorandum of understanding released by Representative Overton Brooks (D-La). Mr. Brooks is chairman of the House Armed Services Subcommittee which has had the controversial subject under study.

In announcing the plan, he said it has the approval of the Army, the Guard and the Subcommittee.

The program is expected to be endorsed by the full Armed Services Committee on 5 March.

Under the terms of the understanding, the enlistment of 11-week trainees for the Guard will terminate in mid-October of this year in order to permit the last of the trainees to complete their 11-week program before the six-months requirement takes effect.

Those who enter the 11-weeks training program between now and the mid-

Coast Guard Tells Promotion Picture; Slates Boards During March & April

(See Also Page 26)

Coast Guard Headquarters estimates that more than 230 temporary and 115 permanent promotions to the ranks of captain, commander, lieutenant commander and lieutenant will be made between the end of February and 1 July.

Included among the anticipated temporary promotions are 20 to four-stripe rank, 41 to three-stripe rank, 67 to lieutenant commander and 105 to lieutenant. During the same period, Headquarters will issue permanent appointments to 24 captains and 31 commanders. At the same time, approximately 30 lieutenant commanders and 30 lieutenants will receive permanent commissions.

A list of nominations to these four ranks was published in the 23 February edition of THE JOURNAL, page 27. When these nominations are approved by the Senate, the entire list of captains and commanders qualified for permanent rank will be wiped off the Coast Guard's eligibility lists. In the ranks of lieutenant commander and lieutenant, the majority will be issued permanent commissions by the end of the Fiscal Year. A few lieutenant commanders and lieutenants will remain on current eligibility lists after 1 July and will be advanced as vacancies open up during the first half of Fiscal Year 1958.

New eligibility lists—for promotion of officers to temporary ranks during Fiscal Year 1958—will be established by Boards which will convene at Headquarters during March and April.

The first Board meets on 5 March to consider the records of 25 commanders for advancement to temporary four-stripe rank. In early April, a Board will meet to establish an eligibility list of about 40 officers for temporary three-stripe rank. At the end of April, a Board will set up an eligibility list of about 40 lieutenants for increased grade.

Approximately 130 lieutenants (jg) will be placed on an eligibility list for lieutenant's rank by a March Board.

Another March Board will study the records of ensigns who graduated with the Class of '54 and place qualified officers on an eligibility list for permanent advancement to the rank of lieutenant (jg).

The Headquarters Retirement Section estimates that 42 captains, commanders, lieutenant commanders and lieutenants will end their careers by 1 July. Included in the estimates are 12 captains, 12 commanders, eight lieutenant commanders and 10 lieutenants (including two resignations already received).

At the end of Fiscal Year 1957 (30 June), the Coast Guard expects to have an on-board strength of 2788 officers. This figure includes 138 Extra Number officers who do not affect the promotion picture.

In addition to the nominations listed in last week's JOURNAL, President Eisenhower sent to the Senate the names of 141 Chief Warrant and Warrant officers

Bill Drops Army, AF Professional Exams

Professional examinations for the promotion of Army and Air Force medical, dental and veterinary corps officers are eliminated by legislation approved by the Kilday House Armed Services Subcommittee.

The proposal (HR 2822) will be considered by the full House Committee on 5 March. It does not affect the Navy.

All Navy officers, both Line and Staff Corps, are required to take professional examinations for promotion and the Navy has stated that it would not be fair to modify the regulations for a select group. The Navy is considering the possibility of wiping out such exams for all officers.

In the Army and Air Force, professional examinations for the promotion of MC, DC and VC officers are not required at present. They were suspended during WW II and again during the Korean emergency.

The new legislation erases the examinations permanently for the Army and Air Force.

for confirmation to the next higher pay-grade. Following Senate approval, the CWO's and WO's will be advanced as each individual completes the required time in grade.

Army Reserve Project Wins Freedom Award

Freedom's Foundation at Valley Forge has presented their top award in the Americana category to Maj. Gen. Philip F. Lindeman.

Chief U. S. Army Reserve and ROTC Affairs, for the series of Army Reserve Documentary films released in 1956.

Dr. Kenneth D. Wells, President of the Foundation, presented the encased George Washington Honor Medal and an American flag in the presence of Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson, J. Edgar Hoover, Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and other distinguished guests who also received principal awards from the Foundation.

Army Reserve and ROTC was honored for the series of motion pictures released in 1956 under the titles: "Do It Yourself Peace," "Tale of 2,000 Cities," "One If By Land," and "The Man In Two Places." The pictures have been distributed to the Public Information Officers at each Army Headquarters and to the offices of the various Chiefs of Military Districts and made available for public showing.

The pictures are obtainable in both 16mm and 35mm, and can be shown on TV, in service clubs, schools, and meetings of similar civic groups.

Nurse Bill O.K.'d

From first page—

the Army Medical Specialist Corps, Regular officers designated as nurses and medical specialists in the Air Force, and officers serving in the Navy Nurse Corps and the Medical Service Corps of the Navy.

Under existing law, the average Army or Air Force nurse serving as a Regular officer can only expect to attain the grade of permanent captain at the time of retirement. In the Navy, a nurse can only expect to attain the grade of lieutenant at the time of retirement.

The House-approved plan raises this career expectancy to the grade of major in the Army and Air Force and to the grade of lieutenant commander in the Navy.

It establishes the authorized Regular strength of the Army Nurse Corps at 2500 nurses, and the authorized strength of Regular officers in the Army Medical Specialist Corps at 350. Up to five Regular nurses may serve in the permanent grade of colonel and not more than 107 in the permanent grade of lieutenant colonel. There will be no restriction on the number of permanent majors in the Nurse Corps.

One officer in the Army Medical Specialist Corps is authorized to serve in the permanent grade of colonel and 20 in the permanent grade of lieutenant colonel. There will be no restriction on the number of permanent majors in the Army Medical Specialist Corps.

In the Navy Nurse Corps, the permanent grade of captain is authorized and two-tenths of one per cent of the officers in the Corps may serve in the grade of captain. The limitation on the number of nurses who may serve in the grade of commander is increased from 1.75 per cent to five per cent and the present limitation (7.75 per cent) on the grade of lieutenant commander is eliminated entirely.

Naval officers in the Medical Service Corps also will have improved career opportunities as a result of the proposal, which eliminates the current two per cent restriction on the number who may serve in the grade of captain.

In the Air Force, as many as five Regular nurses may serve in the permanent grade of colonel and not more than 107 in the permanent grade of lieutenant colonel. There is no restriction on the number of permanent majors.

The bill also authorizes appointment of one officer in the permanent grade of colonel from among officers designated as medical specialists in the Air Force, and authorizes 20 officers designated as medical specialists in the Air Force, to serve in the permanent grade of lieutenant colonel.

The legislation also sets new rules for appointment, service on selection boards and mandatory retirement.

In reporting the measure to the House, the House Armed Services Committee said, "Unless the proposed legislation is enacted the future of the Army and Navy Nurse Corps and officers serving as nurses in the Air Force, as well as medical specialists, will be in grave jeopardy, since the number of individuals applying for appointments as Regular nurses is . . . so low as to foreshadow the possible disintegration of the Regular Nurse Corps in the years ahead."

No opposition to the measure is expected in the Senate.

Aid For Lawyers

graduated basis according to years of service. Those with less than two years' service would receive incentive pay of $100 per month; those with between two and six years' service, $150 per month; between six and 10 years' service, $200 per month; and, for those with more than 10 years' service, $250 per month.

The pay provisions are identical with those now in effect for military physicians and dentists.

The need for new career legislation for lawyers was cited earlier by a committee of the Judge Advocates Association (published in "The Judge Advocate Journal," October 1956).

This group—the Committee on the Status of Lawyers in the Armed Forces—found that implementation of the Uniform Code of Military Justice and other legal requirements have substantially increased the need for qualified lawyers in uniform, but the level of experience necessary to meet such requirements has declined seriously.

HERE ARE OTHER POINTS made by the committee:

The Services have been able to meet their past needs for lawyers only by the use of young law school graduates commissioned in the Reserve.

This source has been kept alive because lawyers are draft vulnerable. However, the result has been that the strength of the uniformed law departments of the Services has been maintained by junior lawyers of junior rank. Almost all of these young officers stay in the Service only as long as required to complete their obligated tours of two or three years.

This complication, coupled with the fact that the senior legal officers are being promoted upwards and leaving the Service by retirement, makes it most evident that a continuance of present policies will only increase the shortage of experienced officers.

The JAA committee, seeking the reasons behind the failure of young lawyers to pursue a military legal career, obtained the comments of hundreds of legal officers.

These comments indicate that such officers feel a civilian legal career offers far greater prestige and financial reward than a military legal career; further, that their profession is the object of discrimination in the matter of pay.

SERVICE LAWYERS point out that while the required educational attainment of an attorney is equal to that of other professional groups and considerably higher than that required of officers skilled in the military profession alone, compensation is not provided on an equitable basis. They observe that legal and medical officers, because of educational requirements, start their military careers at least three years later than other officers and that there is no adjustment of that fact to put lawyers on a par with the other professional categories in the officer corps.

The lawyers also note that while the professional requirements of education and admission to the bar have increased tremendously, the initial grade of judge advocates in WW I was major; in WW II, captain; and now the minimum rank is lieutenant.

Senator Thurmond said he recognizes the Service's need for qualified uniformed lawyers and the necessity of making the military legal career attractive. "Only in that way can the duty of providing top quality legal services to our men in the Armed Forces and their commanders be met."

The Senator's proposal has been referred to the Senate Armed Services Committee and that group has requested the Pentagon's views on the measure.

Approve Navy Nominations

VAdm. James L. Holloway, jr., USN, Chief of Naval Personnel, has been confirmed by the Senate to serve for an additional year in that post.

At the same time the Senate approved all other Navy and Marine Corps nominations which have been submitted by the President, with one exception.

The exception is the nomination of Col. Carey A. Randall, USMC, to have the rank of Brigadier General while serving on the staff of Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson. Further Senate Armed Services Committee consideration of Colonel Randall's appointment has been postponed.

More than 9,500 Navy officers and more than 2,000 Marine Corps officers are in the group which was confirmed.

Pentagon Loses One Assistant Secretary, Another Has Title Changed By SecDef

Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson, following months of delay and study, has combined the Offices of Assistant Secretary of Defense for Research and Development and Assistant Secretary of Defense for Engineering—as recommended last May by the Hoover Commission.

The new title for the combined office: Assistant Secretary of Defense for Research and Engineering.

Its first incumbent: Assistant Secretary Frank D. Newbury, who has been in charge of Engineering.

There is no secret to the fact that during the past several years there have been frequent occasions when the two Assistant Secretaries were in sharp disagreement. A basic problem was the fact that the Assistant Secretary for R&D generally was in favor of more varied research projects than the Assistant Secretary for Engineering, who placed greater relative stress on standardization in order to conserve manpower and improve production.

The time was propitious for Mr. Wilson to make the change in view of the resignation of Assistant Secretary of Defense (R&D) Clifford C. Furnas, Chancellor of the University of Buffalo.

Dr. Furnas had suggested that the Engineering responsibilities be placed under R&D, but Secretary Wilson did not follow this recommendation.

The Defense Department, in announcing the merger, said that Mr. William H. Holladay, Deputy to Dr. Furnas, would be Deputy to Assistant Secretary Newbury.

Mr. Wilson pointed out in making this announcement that the new organization would not decrease the responsibilities or contributions of the scientists in the overall research and engineering program. The combining of the two units complies with the Hoover Commission and other Committee recommendations and should strengthen our technical efforts, the Pentagon said.

The details of the new organization have not been worked out. However, Mr. Wilson said, "Mr. Newbury and Mr. Holladay are working with interested individuals within the Department of Defense to consolidate the organization and revise the working procedures."

"This country and our defense are dependent upon the accomplishments of our scientists and engineers and every effort must be made to maintain a co-operative and efficient environment whereby the results of their work will receive maximum utilization. An obvious advantage of the single office is the greater simplicity of external relationships and internal organization and administration."

Public Affairs

Secretary Wilson announced on 20 Feb. the redesignation of the Office of Assistant Secretary of Defense for Legislative and Public Affairs as the Office of Assistant Secretary of Defense for Public Affairs. The President nominated Mr. Murray Snyder, now serving as Assistant Press Secretary to the President, for this post. Mr. Philip K. Allen will remain as Deputy Assistant Secretary for Public Affairs.

The Deputy Assistant Secretary for Legislative Affairs is being redesignated as Assistant to the Secretary of Defense for Legislative Affairs. The incumbent, Brig. Gen. Clarence J. Hauck, jr., USA, will continue in the new capacity as Assistant to the Secretary of Defense.

Sec'y Wilson Explains R&D Reorganization

Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson was questioned closely at his 26 February news conference concerning his order abolishing the office of Assistant Secretary of Defense for Research and Development.

On the designation of an engineer, Mr. Frank D. Newbury, to take over responsibilities previously held by a scientist, Dr. Clifford C. Furnas, Secretary Wilson commented that the former was "competent to do the job and he was available."

The Secretary explained further:

"The difference between an engineer and a scientist is perhaps not as great as some people try to make out. There is a question of invention comes into it, also. Most scientists are a little more theoretical; perhaps have delved a little deeper into higher mathematics and written papers on various kinds of advanced things, but most engineers understand the language of scientists, whether they are scientists themselves or not."

"The important thing here in the Defense Department is to have somebody in this assignment who has administrative and executive ability; understands how to cooperate with other people and coordinate work. The real majority of our research work and our engineering work is done in contractors' plants; a smaller amount of it in laboratories and arsenals and places like that; plants that are operated by the services. The Defense Department, itself, has practically no activities. So that to some degree, I sense that this assignment is a misunderstood job."

"The responsibility of the staff in the research and engineering and of the Assistant Secretary in charge of it and his deputy is to review and audit activities, to make reports to me, when we get into controversy between the Services; to attempt certain standardizations to be worked out with the Services to eliminate duplication and overlapping of activities; to help establish an order of importance of some of our activities and advice on troubles and difficulties that we get into."

"And the Assistant Secretary of Research and Engineering has no authority to operate, as such. He simply advises the Secretary what he thought up after the staff makes a study, which should be done in a particular case, and whether it is done or not is up to the Secretary, and the Services and the people that do it."

During the give-and-take with newsmen, Secretary Wilson was asked to comment on the statement by Dr. Edward Teller before the Air Force Association's Jet Age Conference that the Russians were in front in scientific effort and that this Nation "must recapture the lead."

On this subject, Secretary Wilson stated:

"I think that I can say I don't quite agree with the appraisal. I don't really, myself, know how anyone can be so sure of what the Russians are doing with the Iron Curtain what it is, and the limited insight that they allow anyone to have, and how anyone can so accurately predict what the situation is going to be ten years from now."

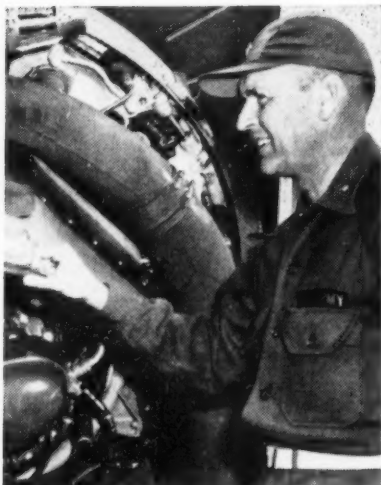

"Russia is a big country; it is larger than ours, and has a bigger population, but only roughly 25% bigger, or less. It's a collection of peoples of many races and origins, and very different levels of education and motivation. Temporarily they have put a great deal of emphasis on mathematical and scientific education. How effective that is I am sure it is a little hard to appraise. They do have competent engineers and scientists; there isn't any doubt of that. They have had back to the Czar's times and they have put a great deal of emphasis on it in the recent two or three decades."

"I think that the fact that they are trying to educate more people in Russia is a hopeful thing for the long pull because I don't think you can teach men and women to think in a restricted area and then put blinkers on them on the sides. In other words, I don't think they can educate their young men and women to think in purely technical lines and not think in social, political, and human relations activities, also. So that I think that the fact that they are trying to educate Russians, generally, in the long run is going to—from the inside—affect the organization of their type of society."

Press: Well, Mr. Secretary, do you think that in light of the fears of some people like Dr. Teller that we will lose out in the technological race that we then ought to increase our activities in pure research to such things as space flights and I believe he said the other day that he didn't think we were going to be the first one to take close-up pictures of the moon at the rate we were going. Do you think in light of that—whether or not you can tell for sure they are ahead—that we ought to do a lot more about it?

Sec'y. Wilson: I think there are more important things than who takes the first close-up picture of the moon myself.

BRIG. GEN. BROGARDUS S. CAIRNS, USA, formerly DCofS for Operations, Hq. U. S. Continental Army Command, who is taking the helicopter pilot course at Ft. Rucker. After qualifying on the rotary wing craft he intends to take the Army course in fixed wing piloting. General Cairns will succeed General Hutton when the latter goes to Germany in June.

New Assignment Chief For Army Nurse Corps

Lt. Col. Carrie E. Barrett, ANC, will be the new Chief, Army Nurse Corps Assignment Section, Personnel Division, Office of the Army Surgeon General on 1 April 1957 succeeding Lt. Col. Mabel G. Stott, ANC, who goes to Ft. Belvoir, Va., to be Chief, Nursing Service, U. S. Army Hospital.

Maj. Mary Catherine Jordan, ANC, now Chief, Nursing Service, U. S. Army Hospital, Ft. Riley, Kans., will be Assistant Chief, Army Nurse Corps Assignment Section. Colonel Barrett has been the section's assistant chief since 27 Feb. 1956.

Sixth Army Graduates 18 Instrument Pilots

The first class of Army aviators pursuing the new Instrument Flying Course being offered by the Sixth U. S. Army was graduated 1 March. Col. Frank G. Forrest, USA, Chief of the Sixth U. S. Army Aviation Section, announces.

The class of 18 students has been in training since 7 Jan. A new class is scheduled to begin 4 March, and the course will be offered at eight week intervals to succeeding classes. The quota for each class is set at 18 students.

The course qualifies Army aviators as "Instrument Pilots" in accordance with Civil Aeronautics Administration standards.

Rucker Shows Way For Army Push

can visualize the pathways of the air in the same terms as it thinks of highways and railways.

Beyond that the people here want to show how aviation can be the "eyes" of the Army for reconnaissance, for artillery spotting and target acquisition, and for surveillance of enemy movements and positions. They want to show how Army aviation can put long legs on both transportation and observation.

Ft. Rucker, and its able commander, Brig. Gen. Carl I. Hutton, USA, has, in fact, a large order in its directive of selling aviation and its capabilities to the Army.

In fact, the mission of the Army Aviation school is an all-embracing one. It provides that it will develop doctrines, procedures, techniques, tactics, relating to the operation and employment of Army aviation in the group level, in joint operations, unilateral Army airborne and amphibious operations, and operations involving logistical support by Army transport aviation.

The mission of the Army Aviation School here embraces a variety of missions. They include:

The mission of the Army Aviation School is—

"a. Within the concept guidance furnished by the Commanding General, Continental Army Command, develop doctrine, procedures, tactics and techniques relating to the operation and employment of Army aviation, including Army transport aviation up to and including the group level, in joint operations; unilateral Army airborne and amphibious operations, and operations involving logistical support by Army Transport aviation.

"b. Instruct and train officers, warrant officers and enlisted personnel of all components, branches, and services of the Army in the functions of Army aviation; the relationship of Army aviation to the branches and services of the Department of Defense, and in the normal employment, capabilities, and limitations of Army aviation at all levels of command.

"c. Conduct, coordinate, and supervise, as directed by Commanding General, Continental Army Command, instruction in flight training of officers, warrant officers, and enlisted men of all components and of all branches and services of the Army to include but not be limited to primary, basic, and advanced flight training in fixed and rotary wing aircraft, and such other specialized flight courses as may be required; and to present instruction in employment, tactics, logistics, and techniques of Army aviation.

"d. Conduct, coordinate, or supervise, as directed by Commanding General, Continental Army Command, the training of commissioned officers, warrant officers and enlisted personnel in the specialized phases of Army aviation to include but not be limited to—

- (1) Advanced Aviation Officer Course.
- (2) Aircraft organizational maintenance.
- (3) Flight simulator operator and repairman.
- (4) Aerial Observer.

"e. Develop and prepare for dissemination

Army's AA Command Has Aviation Meeting

Increased need for use of helicopters in the nation's NIKE guided missile defenses of the Army Antiaircraft Command were reviewed recently at a command aviation officers' conference in Colorado Springs.

The conference at ARAACOM Headquarters, at Ent Air Force Base, was under the direction of the command's aviation officer, Maj. Roy W. Owen. Army aviation officers from ARAACOM's five regional field commands attended.

All aspects of Army aviation was considered. High on the list of matters taken up, however, was the demand for employment of rotary-winged aircraft of the Sikorsky H-19 type. An H-19 is being tested within the Los Angeles defense of the 47th Antiaircraft Artillery Group.

Widely used throughout NIKE-defended areas elsewhere across the nation are helicopters of the Hiller H-23 and Bell H-13 types, which carry lighter loads and have space for only two passengers.

Helicopters comprise a relatively small, but an essential task force throughout the command. They move vitally needed component parts of missile and radar guidance equipment quickly to scattered sites whenever the occasion arises.

Army aviation officers taking part in the conference included: Capt. T. L. Farris, 1st Antiaircraft Region, Ft. Totten, N. Y.; Capt. L. R. Bailey, Jr., 2d AA Region, Ft. Meade, Md.; Capt. W. W. Brisben, 4th AA Region, Grandview AFB, Mo.; Capt. J. F. Fitzgerald, 5th AA Region, Ft. Sheridan, Ill.; and Capt. J. H. Gerber, 6th AA Region, Ft. Baker, Calif.

They conferred with Major Owen and his assistant aviation staff officers, Maj. Jack J. Tinnin, Jr., and Capt. Oliver C. Thomson.

IT BELONGS AMONG THE BLUE CHIPS ...for Returns and Protection

For returns in dividends, your USAA automobile policy belongs among the "blue chips."

The savings to stateside USAA automobile policyholders currently amounts to 36% of manual rates—yet you enjoy the same adequate insurance protection offered by other highly rated companies.

Approximately 300,000 US Armed Forces officers already know this and that is why they are insured with USAA.

The liberal savings offered are possible because USAA operates as a non-profit association. Operating costs are kept down. No salesmen are employed nor are any commissions paid. Selling is done by mail, and eligibility is aimed at a preferred risk group.*

USAA has been serving officers with insurance since 1922. Throughout the United States and in the foreign areas served by USAA are attorneys and claims adjusters to promptly serve members in the event of an accident.

When it's time to insure... insure with confidence... give yourself the best and save too. Insure with USAA.

No matter whether you are stateside, or overseas, USAA is as close as your nearest mailbox, telephone or telegraph office. Your USAA insurance becomes effective as of postmarked time of application, unless a later date is specified.

U. S. Navy and U. S. Marine Corps

Cdr. Smith Heads New Career Pilot Section

A new Reserve Officer Career Section, headed by Cdr. J. W. Smith, USN, has been set up in the Aviation Liaison Branch of the Bureau of Naval Personnel.

The Section was established to handle applications expected as a result of a recent Navy policy which increases the opportunities for Reserve pilots to remain on active duty, or, if they are on inactive duty, to return to active service.

The policy applies to all officers through the rank of lieutenant who have dates of rank as lieutenants not earlier than July 1953.

The Section also is charged with providing current information concerning promotion opportunities, special training and the indefinite retention on active duty plan.

Reserve Pilots interested in the program should address their inquiries to the new Section (Pers B15r), the Navy said.

Other officers ordered to the Section are: LCdr. P. E. LeBlanc, USN, and Lts. Aubrey R. Anderson, USN, and Walter A. White, USN.

USN Unveils Two-Million Volt X-Ray Machine

The Navy has a giant X-ray machine to test nuclear reactor castings for atomic powered ships and submarines.

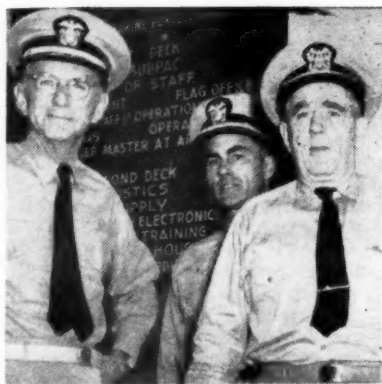

The massive machine was recently dedicated by Capt. Elias B. Mott, USN, at the U. S. Naval Magazine, Port Chicago, Ill. Captain Mott is the Magazine's Commanding Officer.

Present plans call for the castings to undergo high-quality testing by the new two-million volt X-ray unit before being sent to shipyards.

The new instrument is the first major radio-graphic installation of its kind west of the Alleghenies.

Captain Mott says it will effect major savings in overall costs by insuring top quality in ordnance materials and other equipment.

The machine's services will be made available to commercial firms holding Government contracts as well as to other agencies of the Defense Department.

First A-Powered Missile Cruiser Is "Long Beach"

The Navy has chosen the name "Long Beach" for the first nuclear-powered guided missile cruiser.

Construction on the CG(N)-160, the first United States cruiser to be built from the keel up since WWI, soon will be started by the Bethlehem Steel Co., Quincy, Mass.

She is scheduled for completion at the end of 1960.

Patuxent NATC Cited For Copter FIP Tests

Four Bell HUL-1 helicopters recently completed the Navy's "fleet introduction program" tests in record time, winning a letter of commendation from the chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics to the Commander Naval Air Test Center, Patuxent River, Md.

In 18 flying days the new utility model Navy helicopters piled up 501.2 hours' flight time.

Admiral James S. Russell, BuAer chief, cited the "outstanding" maintenance performance of the HUL's and the Navy personnel.

El Toro F4D Sq. Sets High Mark At Mojave

Marine All-Weather Fighter Squadron 115 of the Third Marine Aircraft Wing returned to the El Toro (Calif.) Marine Corps Air Station from the Marine Corps Auxiliary Air Station at Mojave. They brought with them a book full of new records for the supersonic F4D-1 "Sky-ray."

Led by Lt. Col. Ralph H. "Smokey" Spanjer, USMC, squadron C.O., the "Desert Rats" flew a total of 1028.8 hours during 22 days of flying at Mojave. This nearly triples the record of a Navy "Sky-ray" Squadron which surpassed the 300 hour mark.

The Marines hit their stride with an amazing safety record, as the entire accomplishment was without incident; no accidents, not even a blown-out tire. Public credit for this was given to Douglas Aircraft and to Capt. James Cole, squadron maintenance officer, M/Sgt. Jerry Bellsmith, engineering chief, and their ground crews.

Each pilot flew an average of 40 hours in the deployment from El Toro. Also entered in the record books at the end of the training period were: 215.9 instrument hours in simulated ground approach; 304 simulated flameout approaches. (All pilots fully qualified in flameout approach and flight under actual instrument conditions); 288 instrument approaches; and 106.9 hours of night flying.

Marine Corps Grants Extended Tours to 13

Marine Corps Headquarters has extended the active duty tours of 13 Reserve officers.

Included in the total are three captains, nine 1st lieutenants and one 2d lieutenant. Their names and the final dates of the extensions are:

CAPTAIN

M/Sgt. Pounder Takes First In Marine Shoot

M/Sgt. Jerome L. Pounder, USMC, stationed at MCB 29 Palms, Calif., turned in a 244 score to take first place in the Fifth Annual Leatherneck Rifle Marksmanship Contest.

Second place honors went to PFC David Thayer, USMC, San Diego, and third place was won by S/Sgt. Thomas M. James, USMC, of Camp Pendleton, Calif.

Each quarter throughout the year, three enlisted men are named the top shooters. In turn, they compete with each other for prizes in the annual contest.

While West Coast Marines were earning the top three slots, Camp Lejeune, N. C., shooters were pouring in scores which gave them the next 13 places.

S/Sgt. Gerald Beckett, USMC, 2d Marine Division, won a gold medal and $50 with a 236 score. Cpl. D. L. Holdridge, USMC, 2d Combat Service Group won a silver medal and $40 with a 236.

Bronze medal and $20 winners were Cpl. William Whittaker, USMC, of Marine Base, and Sgt. Thomas Phebus, USMC, of Division.

Cpl. William Graydon, USMC, and S/Sgt. Raymond Hagler, USMC, both of 2d Division, won $10 along with Cpl. Jim Worthing, USMC, and Cpl. Joe Hobbs, USMC, both of Marine Base.

PFC Lawrence Brown, USMC, Marine Base won a Bronze medal and $30.

PFC Donald Kohn, USMC, of Force Troops, fired a 232 for a Bronze medal and $20.

Winners of $10 prizes were PFC Jesse E. Ball, USMC, of Base, PFC William Sanchez, USMC, 10th Marines, and PFC Thomas C. Swentofsky, USMC, 2d Am Tracs.

Marine Corps Adopts Combat "Pop-Up" Target

The Marine Corps has adopted "The Pop-up," an electronically controlled combat marksmanship target for small arms.

The new training device, which goes into service at Camp Lejeune, N. C., Camp Pendleton, Calif., and Quantico, Va., this summer, consists of a silhouette target, and actuating mechanism and an electronic control panel.

Details concerning other developments in the Corps' Marksmanship Program, headed by Col. Robert D. Moser, USMC, were reported in the 23 February issue of THE JOURNAL.

"The Pop-up" can be used singly or in a series at known or unknown distances in realistic tactical situations. The device is transportable and weatherproof and can be left in the open at a permanent installation or moved about to change the combat training problem.

In operation, the electronic target can be set up out of sight of the trainee. As a man approaches "The Pop-up," an operator can activate the device suddenly. If the marksman scores a hit, the impact of the bullet lowers the target to a horizontal position and records a score on the control panel.

The operator can reset the target by remote control.

Approve Three-Star Marine Corps Ranks

The Kilday House Armed Services Subcommittee has approved legislation (HR 3235) authorizing the Marine Corps to have five lieutenant generals in peacetime.

The Corps currently has five three-star officers, but is authorized only two except in wartime or national emergency.

Similar legislation was approved by the House during the 84th Congress but failed to be acted upon by the Senate. The new legislation will be considered by the full House Committee on 5 March.

Flag Officers Shifts

RADM. LESTER K. RICE, USN, Commander, Carrier Division Seven, takes the helm of Fleet Air, Quonset Point, R. I., in March.

RADM. PAUL L. DUDLEY, USN, Commander, Carrier Division 18, becomes a member of the Joint Strategic Survey Committee, JCS, Washington, D. C.

RADM. OCIE B. MORRISON, MC, USN, Commanding Officer, Naval Hospital, Portsmouth, Va., assumes duties as Fifth Naval District Medical Officer in June.

Cdr. Anderson Named CO of USS Nautilus

Cdr. William R. Anderson, USN, on duty with the Atomic Energy Commission, Washington, D. C., has been named to succeed Capt. Eugene P. Wilkinson, USN, as Commanding Officer of the atomic submarine USS Nautilus.

Captain Wilkinson has been ordered to the Naval War College, Newport, R. I.

U. S. Air Force

Gen. Smith Heads Hdqrs. In Japan On 1 July

Lt. Gen. Frederic H. Smith, jr., USAF, Commander of the Fifth Air Force, in addition to his present duty, will assume command of the unified headquarters of U. S. Forces in Japan in Tokyo, on 1 July.

This is announced by General L. L. Lemnitzer, USA, Commander-in-Chief, Far East Command, on behalf of Admiral Felix B. Stump, USN, Commander-in-Chief, Pacific.

As previously announced the areas and responsibilities of the Commander-in-Chief, Pacific and the Commander-in-Chief, Far East Command, will be consolidated under Admiral Stump on 1 July.

General Smith will coordinate activities of the Army, Navy and Air Force in Japan and will act for the Commander-in-Chief, Pacific in matters involving the United States Forces in Japan and the Japanese Government.

General Smith is the son of Maj. Gen. Frederic H. Smith, USA-Ret.

Tenth AF Wins Plaque Again

Tenth Air Force with headquarters at Selfridge AFB, Mich., has been named winner for the second time of the Continental Air Command Administrative Effectiveness Plaque.

Lt. Gen. Charles B. Stone III, USAF, ConAC Commander, in ceremonies at his command headquarters at Mitchel AFB, N. Y., presented the plaque to Maj. Gen. Robert E. L. Eaton, USAF, Tenth AF commander.

The plaque is awarded quarterly on a rotating basis to the Air Force judged most effective in fulfilling its administrative requirements.

AF REGULAR APPLICATIONS

Reserve officers submitting applications for regular Air Force commissions under the Regular Officer Augmentation Program should do so at the earliest possible moment.

Brig. Gen. Horace M. Wade, SAC director of personnel, pointed out the deadline for applications at base level is 14 March. However, he noted that if there is an error in an application that can be corrected only by the individual submitting it, the time delay may make it too late for the command board to consider the application if it is received too close to the deadline.

AF Career Fact Book Wins Wide Favor

Air Force personnel officials report the recently issued "Officers' Career Fact Book" is receiving wide acceptance by individuals at base level.

This comprehensive book provides young officers with career information not readily available from a single source. It is aimed particularly at officers on obligated tours whose retention in the service is important to the well-being of the present-day and future Air Force.

The book shows career conditions in the Air Force as they actually exist, explains how assignments are made and highlights proposed personnel and legislative actions which make career service attractive to the individual and his family.

One chapter deals with the Air Force's future and its missions as the air arm of the defense team; another provides a discussion of the leadership responsibilities that young officers assume with their commissioning. There is a chapter on "Stimulating Careers," and another on "Educational Opportunities," which shows how the officer can further his education both professionally and off duty.

Col. Vague Region Chief For Service Transport

Appointment of Col. Thomas R. Vague, USAF, as Regional Director, Southwestern Traffic Region with headquarters in Dallas, Tex., is announced by Maj. Gen. E. C. R. Lasher, USA, Executive Director, Military Traffic Management Agency, Washington, D. C.

Colonel Vague served with the Joint Military Transportation Committee, Joint Chiefs of Staff in Washington prior to his transfer to the MTMA. For the past eight years he has been involved in joint transportation operations and planning.

As Regional Director, Colonel Vague will have management responsibility for all commercial freight and passenger transportation used by some 115 Armed Forces installations located in the states of Arkansas, Louisiana, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Texas. His headquarters will commence operations about 1 April and will ultimately be manned by some 12 officers and 58 civilian traffic technicians drawn from existing traffic offices of all the services which are scheduled for deactivation.

Lt. Col. Meranda To Hawaii

Lt. Col. Mark D. Meranda, USAF, who has served as Director of the Air Force Public Information Office in Los Angeles the past four and a half years, has departed on leave prior to reporting for overseas duty in Hawaii.

Capt. Ben H. Scarpero, USAF, is Acting Director until the arrival of Colonel Meranda's successor in mid-March.

Senate Approves Air Force Nominations

The Senate has approved all pending Presidential nominations in the Air Force with the exception of two names which were withdrawn.

Included in the group of 3,790 officers are Major Generals D. C. Strother, J. A. Sanford and F. A. Armstrong for three-star rank.

Permanent promotions to two-star rank in the AF included ten officers from Maj. Gen. William M. Morgan to Maj. Gen. Frederick J. Dau.

Permanent promotions to one-star rank included 23 officers from Brig. Gen. Oliver K. Niess to Maj. Gen. Bernard A. Schriever.

Temporary appointments to Major General included 31 officers from Brig. Gen. Albert G. Hewitt to Brig. Gen. James Ferguson.

Temporary appointments to Brigadier General included 30 officers from Col. Richard D. Wentworth to Col. James W. Wilson.

Seven officers were nominated for appointment in the USAF Reserve as follows: Brigadier Generals Harry Crutcher, Jr., and Stanford W. Gregory to be Major Generals; Colonels Cady R. Bullock, Howard F. Butler, Collins H. Ferris, Donald J. Strait and William W. Spruance to be Brigadier Generals.

Brig. Gen. Marvin Edward Kennebeck, MC, USAF, was confirmed for temporary appointment as Major General.

All nominations to ranks below general officer were confirmed with the exception of the nominations of Ellis Verne Widney and John David Vanderveer, nominated to be majors, which were withdrawn by the President.

Airman's Guide

A new edition of The Airman's Guide has been published by The Military Service Publishing Company of Harrisburg, Pa. The new issue, the eighth, is 495 pages long and retails for $3. It is a ready reference of helpful information and counsel for Air Force enlisted personnel.

Nominate 11 AFR Generals

President Eisenhower nominated movie actor James Stewart and 10 others this week for appointment to new general officer grades in the Air Force Reserve.

The group also includes former General Services Administrator Jess Larson.

Here is the list:

To Maj. Gen.

Theron B Herndon Robert J Smith
John P Henebry

To Brig. Gen.

Jess Larson John B Montgomery
Daniel DeBrier James M Stewart
Kenneth Stiles John O Bradshaw
John R Allison Ramsey D Potts, jr

Gen. Kenney At McConnell

General George C. Kenney, USAF-Ret., was the guest speaker at the McConnell Air Force Base Officers' Formal Stag recently. He spoke on "Air Power in the Atomic Age."

General and Mrs. Kenney reside in Gardiner, Me. At present, General Kenney is Director of the Arthritis and Rheumatism Foundation.

NEW MATS ACCIDENT INSURANCE PLAN

Year-round, all-coverage accident insurance is now available to all Military Air Transport Service personnel assigned to the transport mission.

The new policy, known as "Add 24," is designed to afford aviation accident protection for MATS crew members, replacing the former restricted MATS crew policy which provided protection only against aircraft accident. The plan was broadened, however, to afford full 24-hour accident coverage, and is available to ground support and administrative personnel as well. Members of the technical services of the command—AACs, APCs, AWS, and ARS—are not eligible for this coverage.

The insurance may be purchased in multiples of $5,000 to a maximum of $15,000. Quarterly premiums are $6.25 per $5,000. Additionally, a policy fee of two dollars is assessed to the initial policy.

MATS officials stated that the new policy "is an important adjunct to the now familiar passenger trip accident insurance."

DAMAGE POTENTIALS

The Air Force's Air Research and Development Command has begun testing operations on its new damage potential range at Eglin AFB, Fla.

The range has a 2000-foot rocket-propelled sled track which is capable of testing missiles and missile components ranging in size from 20mm cannon to warheads of medium-size guided missiles. Speeds over Mach 3 are expected to be attained on the track.

Technicians of ARDC's Air Force Armament Center boost the item being fired to high speeds on the sled track before it actually is fired. The results obtained will be comparable to those that would have been achieved in an actual aerial test mission. By simulating an aerial firing of the item under the controlled conditions that can be obtained on the ground through the use of the sled track, much basic data can be accumulated at less expense and with much greater safety.

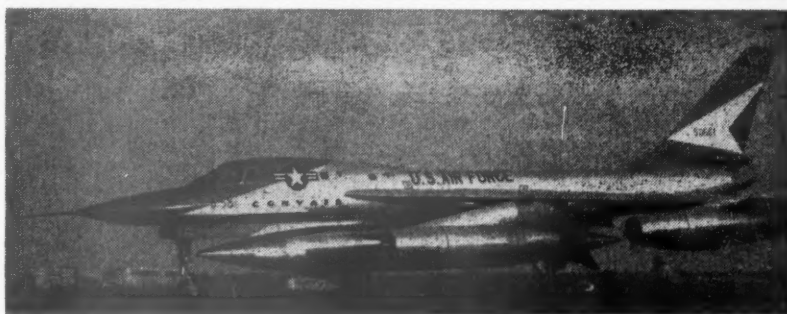

The tests conducted on the range will be of three basic types: to gain information on the damage potential of the munition; to determine the functioning of fuses on the various missiles, and to gather data in the "crosswinds" ballistic area.

AFROTC Academic Titles Granted 9 At Maxwell

The Air University has granted academic titles to nine civilian staff members of Headquarters, Air Force ROTC, at Maxwell AFB, Ala.

Academic titles and the employees receiving them were announced as follows: Dr. Enoch I. Sawin and Dr. Charles B. Todd, Professors of Education; Dr. Herbert J. Vent, Professor of Geography; Dr. Francis A. Cartier, Associate Professor of Communication; Mr. Vergil M. McIntosh, Associate Professor of Psychology; Mr. James E. Gillespie, Associate Professor of Education; Mr. Loraine Stauffer, Assistant Professor of English; Mr. West B. Bonfield, Assistant Professor of Communication, and Mr. Rex O. Matthews, Assistant Professor of English.

Academic titles are granted by Air University to personnel who qualify through experience, responsibility, and level of assignment, in keeping with sound academic practice.

FIRST VIEW of the USAF B-58 "Hustler" with detachable "pod" carried under its fuselage. America's first supersonic bomber, the Convair B-58 was designed specifically to carry such capsules. This feature permits the delta-winged plane to perform a greater variety of missions. The B-58 is built by General Dynamics Corporation's Convair Division at its Fort Worth, Texas, plant where it is now undergoing flight testing. Photos of the pod were released for publication following the first flight of the B-58 with its pod attached. In previous photos (The Journal, 5 Jan.) the faster-than-sound bomber without its pod, appeared to be standing on long stilt-like legs.

TAC's 19th AF Holds Limited War Test

The Tactical Air Command's readiness for meeting "brush-fire" war situations with composite air strike forces was vigorously exercised last week as combat units of the Command conducted an air war against theoretical aggressors over a seven-state southern area. The area duplicated an overseas region in which enemy forces have launched a limited war.

The exercise, designated Feb-Ex, was planned and conducted by TAC's Nineteenth Air Force, from Foster AFB, Tex., and was designed to provide TAC units and personnel training as air strike force elements under combat conditions. The operation included use of simulated nuclear and high explosive weapons.

Air operations, conducted over the area from Florida to Texas and up into Oklahoma and Arkansas, included air defense ground attack fighter sweep escort, high level bombing and reconnaissance missions. Aircraft involved included supersonic North American F-100 day fighters, Republic F-84F fighter-bombers, Douglas B-66 tactical bombers and RF-84F and RB-66 reconnaissance aircraft. A total of 589 sorties was flown.

The requirements for this new kind of exercise were cited by Brig. Gen. Henry Vicellio, USAF, Nineteenth Air Force Commander, as an outgrowth of TAC's role as a deterrent to limited aggression.

Purpose of Exercise FEB-EX, General Vicellio stated, was to assure that our combat units are maintained in a state of readiness for rapid movement to any part of the world on short notice and with the capability for going into action immediately upon arrival. This is in furtherance of the TAC mission of maintaining combat ready units for meeting any hostile action in which U. S. forces might be committed.

As a means of achieving maximum reality for the Exercise, participating squadrons were moved to remote sites of their Exercise bases with minimum essential support personnel and equipment, after flying 1400 to 1900 miles profile missions duplicating deployments.

Combat situations were developed by the Nineteenth Air Force, which commanded the air strike force operations from an air cooperations center established adjacent to Nineteenth Air Force Headquarters at Foster. Participating units were dispersed on Foster AFB, England AFB, La., and to Eglin AF Auxiliary Field No. 9, Fla.

The Nineteenth Air Force is a streamlined mobile headquarters, which plans and conducts TAC's Air Strike Force deployments and other specialized tactical air operations. The Unit is assigned to Ninth Air Force.

Participating units included the 450th Fighter Day Wing, Foster AFB, 366th Fighter Bomber Wing, England AFB, 17th Bomb Wing, Eglin Air Force Auxiliary Field No. 9, and 363d Tactical Reconnaissance Wing, Shaw AFB, S. C. TAC's Eighteenth Air Force provided airlift support for movement of 363d Wing elements to England AFB, and for deployment of elements of the 8th Communications Group and 507th Tactical Control Group into the Exercise area.

While marshalling yards and manufacturing centers of major cities and air installations throughout the area were subjected to practice attacks by the combat aircraft with simulated weapons, the Matagorda Island Bombing Range near Foster AFB, was utilized for delivery of actual high explosive weapons with atomic simulators by the fighter bombers.

Westover's New Commander

Col. Edward D. Wooten, USAF, Director of Materiel of the 340th Bombardment Wing at Whiteman AFB, Mo., will become base commander at Westover AFB, Mass. about 1 March.

He will succeed Col. Kenneth D. Thompson, USAF, who is departing to become Base Commander of Forbes AFB, Kans.

Whiteman and Forbes are both Strategic Air Command installations of the Eighth Air Force.

R&D In Jeopardy? The Services and Industry, which together make up the Defense Team, must be wary of the surprising decision announced this week by Secretary Charles E. Wilson to merge the Offices of the Assistant Secretaries of Defense for Research and Development and Engineering. In the consolidation, Engineering came out on top—at least for the present. This of course, could be the happenstance of the fact that the chief of R&D, Dr. Clifford C. Furnas, had resigned his post to return to duties as the Chancellor of the University of Buffalo, and that the Chief of Engineering, Mr. Frank D. Newbury, who has valuable Pentagon experience, is staying on.

Whatever the personalities involved, there will be proper concern over the implications of Mr. Wilson's action. Noteworthy is the fact that at the time the Hoover Commission recommendations were made public last Spring, it was Mr. Wilson himself who opposed the recommendation that the two Assistant Secretariats be merged. He said that there was proper work for each official. What changed Mr. Wilson's mind is not known.

That there is reason for alarm over the apparent downgrading of R&D is evident. One need only recall the appeal by General Nathan F. Twining, USAF, Chief of Staff, for a stepped-up R&D effort following his return from a visit to Russia last year. Instead, the Air Force R&D effort is being reduced. The Army has said that its civilian R&D director should be an Assistant Secretary; presumably Mr. Wilson's new order will thwart that objective.

The recent Jet Age Conference of the Air Force Association was featured by repeated calls for more intensified R&D efforts. Dr. Edward Teller, the brilliant thermo-nuclear physicist, issued the challenging statement that this Nation's task now was not to try to stay ahead of the Russians in science, but rather to try and "recapture" the lead.

It could very well be that Mr. Wilson's decision to abolish the R&D post at the Pentagon does not mean necessarily a further curtailment of research and development expenditures and efforts. Let us hope so. But the fear that is being voiced in the Services and in Industry is justified and understandable. There is wonder why Mr. Wilson, who has indicated that he may be leaving office this year, did not choose to leave this important decision for his successor, particularly since he himself declined for so long a time to take action on the Hoover Commission recommendation.

A Place In History. A distinguished "Son of the Service," Lt. Gen. Hubert R. Harmon, USAF-Ret., died on George Washington's Birthday, 22 Feb., at Lackland AFB, Tex., at the age of sixty-four. With his death, the Nation has lost a distinguished officer who will live in history.

General Harmon, a comrade of President Eisenhower in the class of '15 at the U. S. Military Academy, was the son of an Army officer. He is survived by his widow, a daughter, and a son, Cadet Kendrick Harmon, USMA, '57, who continues a family record of notable service.

It was fitting that General Eisenhower should have named General Harmon to be the first Superintendent of the U. S. Air Force Academy. General Harmon had been largely responsible for planning the new Service Academy, which was strongly supported by General Eisenhower during the latter's tenure as President of Columbia University and as Supreme Allied Commander, Europe.

The fact that the USAF Academy got off to such an auspicious start was due in no small part

End Rent Gouging. The Senate, which thus far this session has been able to take little action on military legislation, should make a special point of speeding Armed Services Committee consideration and subsequent floor passage of House-passed legislation (THE JOURNAL 23 February) authorizing reduced rentals for 36,000 Service families who are forced arbitrarily to occupy substandard quarters. By all rights, this legislation should have been enacted into law last year.

It is recalled that both the House and Senate during the preceding session of Congress approved the principle of reduced rentals for substandard facilities—some of them described by legislators as "disgraceful" and "shocking" in terms of American living standards. Despite the fact that both the House and Senate passed the necessary legislation, the law was not enacted because the two groups could not reach agreement, prior to adjournment, on the period of time to be granted the Department of Defense in eliminating such shoddy housing completely.

Now, the House has passed a new bill with a two year proviso. It will permit about $15 million per year in rental savings. Any delay in Senate action will continue a morale shattering situation in which the Federal Government is, in effect, gouging Service families. The two year limitation appears satisfactory, for everyone wants all substandard housing eliminated as quickly as possible. And if an extension should be needed, Congress could be expected to give sympathetic consideration at that time.

One amendment seems desirable, however. That would extend the reduced rentals to hundreds of bachelor officers, including nurses and medical specialists, who are charged full rentals for second-rate facilities. Their plight deserves consideration also.

The Pentagon should use all possible persuasion to gain quick action in the Senate for justifiable rental cuts. No one wants the Government to be an oppressive landlord.

QUOTES FROM THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago (1 March 1947)—In the interests of efficiency and economy Congress should provide funds in the forthcoming 1948 Appropriation bills for the launching of sizable housing projects for the personnel and their families stationed at posts of the Army, Navy and Air Force. The enormous construction projects carried on during the War were all of a temporary nature and at emergency locations with the result that the situation as to permanent quarters at posts, air fields, and shore installations is worse now than before the War.

50 Years Ago (2 March 1907)—Inasmuch as the Army and Navy Journal has from the very beginning contended that the construction of the Panama Canal should be placed under the supervision of the Engineer Corps, the fact that President Roosevelt has finally reached the same conclusion is especially gratifying to all who are familiar with the character, training, skill and achievements of our engineer officers.

90 Years Ago (2 March 1867)—Some of our officers, particularly those serving on the Pacific Coast and the Plains, are questioning the wisdom of trying to make the Army "self-supporting" by imposing upon it agricultural labors. This self-sustaining move is no new feature in the military profession, it having been tried to some extent in European armies.

READERS' VIEWS

(Letters to the Editor must have author's name and address, but name will be omitted on publication if writer so states. Longer letters may be extracted for publication.)

Nurse & MSC Coverage Praised

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I wish to take this opportunity to express appreciation to you and your staff for the splendid coverage you have given the legislation for nurses and medical specialists which is concurrently under consideration by the Congress.

It has been a source of gratification to the many members of the Army Medical Specialist Corps who read THE JOURNAL, as well as to me personally, to note the favorable and generous editorial comment which has frequently appeared concerning the need for improved career opportunities for nurses and medical specialists in the Army, Navy and Air Force. We are pleased, too, of course, with the increased understanding achieved by the wide publicity which THE JOURNAL has afforded this legislation.

As we in the Army Medical Specialist Corps approach the first major milestone in the history of our Corps—its tenth anniversary in April—we shall look forward with both pride and pleasure to your continuing support.

Artillery Insignia Barrage

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Reference letter to the editor, Maj. & 1st Lt. Art., in the JOURNAL for 23 Feb. 1957, the writers are in slight error—it's not 50 years of tradition going down the drain, it's 121 years.

Regulations of 1836, Art. 52, Sec. 10: Artillery, Caps . . . "gilt eagle and cross cannons and the number of the regiment . . ." (Uniform of the Army of the US, 1774-1889, M. I. Ludington, OQMG 1889, p. 16).

The cross cannons of the Artillery are the oldest of all the distinctive branch insignia, even predating the famed buttons with castle, etc., of the Corps of Engineers by some three years.

Maybe this change is in keeping with changing the stars of a general's license plate to XX, or to a recent list of units which credited the Artillery with being organized in 1907.

GEORGE RUHLIN
COL., ARTY.

P.S.—Yes, where does one place the number called off loud and strong on the new insignia?

Pay and Economy

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

It is not often that I feel compelled to write the Editor. However, your 19 Jan. 57 front page article headed "Pay Money There! Will it be Used?" causes me to take pen in hand.

Your article infers increased pay requires increased cost. I hold this is not necessarily so. An adequate rise of pay to proper levels has a great prospect, if not a certainty, of reducing other costs in the Services so as to make a rise to an adequate proper pay, a true savings in the number of dollars expended and value received for these dollars.

For one example, consider the extensive cost to train new personnel replacements each year. The people, dollars, supplies, etc. used each year to train new replacement personnel, both officers and men, will be sharply reduced if by paying adequate wages, we retain personnel. Dollars saved can be used to offset costs of increased pay. Personnel not needed to train recruits can fill units or otherwise reflect savings. Etcetera. Etcetera. Take a good look and the possibilities are huge. Total savings cannot help to more than compensate for and completely offset the few added dollars to the pay roll.

"TAKE ANOTHER LOOK"

Third Army Hq., Hub Of Regular, Nat. Gd. & Res. Training, Busy With Evaluation Of New Five-Sided Division Organization

Hq., THIRD U. S. ARMY
Ft. McPHERSON, GA.

UPPERMOST in the thoughts of the Third U. S. Army command these days is the efficient completion of the great responsibility placed upon it by the Department of the Army in evaluating the new and revolutionary Pentomic organization of the 101st Airborne Division.

Although this evaluation pertains primarily to the airborne division, the results will bear heavily upon the future organization of every division in the U. S. Army, for decision has been reached at the highest level to reorganize all infantry and armored divisions, as well as airborne, along the new stripped down, highly mobile, and heavy firepower five-sided concept.

The new organization grew out of lengthy studies conducted by the Continental Army Command. When the proposed set-up was approved by the Department of the Army, Lt. Gen. Thomas F. Hickey, USA, Commanding General of the Third Army, was assigned the mission of activating, training, and evaluating the 101st Airborne Division in its "new look."

THIS WAS A LOGICAL ASSIGNMENT for the famed Third Army, for its vast seven-state area in the Southeastern states, with its year around favorable climate for training, exercises, and maneuvers is the home of the airborne.

Ft. Bragg, N. C., is Headquarters of the XVIII Airborne Corps, commanded by Maj. Gen. Paul D. Adams. Units of the XVIII Corps at Bragg include the 82d Airborne Division, Corps Artillery, and several Service Support Units.

Ft. Campbell, Ky. is the second large airborne post in the Third Army. (Actually the State of Kentucky is the Second Army Area, but some while ago Ft. Campbell was shifted to Third Army control. This was logical not only because by far the greater portion of the Ft. Campbell reservation is actually in Tennessee, although its post office is in Kentucky, but also the move brought both airborne posts under single administration). Ft. Campbell is the home of the Army's first Pentomic division, the 101st Airborne under Maj. Gen. Thomas L. Sherburne, USA. The 101st is subordinate to the XVIII Corps at Ft. Bragg. Other XVIII Corps units at Campbell include one Field Artillery Battalion and several Engineer Strategic Reserve Units.

When the new mission was assigned to General Hickey he, as Test Director, set up a Director Headquarters at Ft. Campbell and charged it with the mission of planning, directing, and conducting tests for evaluating and determining the adequacy of the new concepts of doctrine and organization, effecting close liaison both with the XVIII Corps and the 101st Division.

First a "Detailed Plan of Test" was prepared. Troop tests, under the designation JUMP LIGHT, covering the smallest units and running through the Airborne Infantry Combat Group and finally the Division itself, were completed early last month.

THE FINAL, AND CRITICALLY IMPORTANT TASK in this project under General Hickey's responsibility, is the preparation of the Final Report to be submitted to CONARC by 22 March.

To meet this deadline requires a very compressed writing and review schedule. Four days after completion of the last troop test, which took place 1 Feb., reports of unit commanders were submitted on a staggered schedule. Following these reports, the Division Commander's comments were submitted, likewise on a staggered schedule. Evaluators from Test Director headquarters then went to work on these reports and comments, with a board review for the latter.

Test objectives cover determination of effectiveness in the fields of: tactical and logistical doctrine, communications, command and staff organization, administration, ability for supervision of training, intelligence, and determination of changes to increase effectiveness for employment of the five-sided division in an airborne assault role, utilizing a realistic minimum of aircraft.

General Hickey's final report will present a concise version of principal JUMP LIGHT results in the form of:

1. The Test Director's Summary;
2. The answers to CONARC directed problem areas;
3. A unit evaluation report for each of the major components of the division;
4. A brief narrative enabling a fuller appreciation of JUMP LIGHT problems and results; and,
5. A catalogue of supporting documents to permit ready access to all JUMP LIGHT data.

VITALLY IMPORTANT as this responsibility is to the future of the entire Army, it is just another task superimposed on the normally busy and active Third Army. This week-end, for example, Third Army headquarters and more than 1,800 Reserve, National Guard, and Regular Army commanders and their staffs are participating in LUCKY BRAVO, a command-post exercise at Ft. Gordon, Ga. This exercise features an air movement of a two corps Army, with supporting troops, deep behind enemy lines, with emphasis on the complicated logistical problem of supplying the airhead for a 250-day period. Twenty-one unit headquarters staffs and commanders are participating.

In early April a significant part of the 101st Airborne Division will make a tactical airlift and parachute jump at Ft. Polk, La., as participants in KING COLE, the largest Army exercise since SAGE BRUSH.

FIRST PRINCIPAL MISSION of Third Army, of course, is to perform normal command functions for all activities and installations assigned to it, this is, Class I activities and installations.

Second principal mission is to provide certain administrative and logistical support for all activities and installations directly controlled by the Department of the Army which are located geographically within its area. These are Class II installations and activities and Class III installations.

Third principal mission is to supervise training and support of the National Guard, Army Reserves, and ROTC. (There are in the Area five National Guard Divisions, two Army Reserve Divisions and a Maneuver Area Command, and 36 Senior Division ROTC Units and 10 Military School Division Units at its College and Schools.) Following the special emphasis on Reserve as the result of the Reserve Forces Act of 1955, General Hickey activated the Third U. S. Army Reserve Command with his Deputy Commanding General as its head and the Chiefs of the seven Military Districts as his Deputies.

NINE ACTIVE ARMY POSTS are in the Third Army area. They include Ft. Bragg and Ft. Campbell, mentioned above, and:

Ft. McPherson, Ga., where General Hickey maintains his headquarters. Lt. Col. Joseph D. McNally is Post Commander.

Ft. Jackson, S. C., where the major unit is the U. S. Army Training Center (Inf) commanded by Maj. Gen. Nomando A. Costello.

Ft. Gordon, Ga., under Maj. Gen. Philip E. Gallagher. Several Signal Strategic Reserve units, a Disciplinary Barracks, the 500th Transportation Group, and several Transportation Strategic Reserve Units comprise the Class I units and activities there, while Class II activities include: A Signal Corps Training Center, including the Southeastern Signal School, The Provost Marshal General Training Center and School, and the Civil Affairs & Military Government School with supporting Troops.

Ft. Stewart, Ga., commanded by Brig. Gen. Paul R. Weyrauch, is designated the Antiaircraft Artillery and Tank Training Center, with its Aerial Target Detachments and other supporting troops.

Ft. Benning, Ga., commanded by Maj. Gen. Herbert B. Powell, the major activity is the Infantry Center and School. (See article by General Powell in last week's JOURNAL). Here, too, is the 3d Infantry Division and the 29th RCT.

Ft. Rucker, Ala., commanded by Brig. Gen. Carl I. Hutton, is the home of the U. S. Army Aviation Center and School. (See special story elsewhere in this issue.)

Ft. McClellan, Ala., has two major activities: the Women's Army Training Center and School and the Chemical Corps Training Command and School. Col. William T. Moore is Post Commander.

It is interesting to note that all newly appointed Regular Army second lieutenants of the Combat Arms are required to take either Ranger Training, Airborne Training, or Light Aviation Flight Training and that the Third Army contains the only centers in the Continental U. S. for these types of training: Dahlgren, Ga., where the Ranger Department of the Infantry School conducts the mountain phase, and Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., where the Air Force is host to the Army for the conduct of the Jungle Training Phase; and, of course, Forts Bragg, Campbell and Benning for airborne, and Ft. Rucker for Army aviation.

THE THIRD ARMY AREA covers some 343,000 square miles, a land area larger than Japan, Korea, and Formosa combined. Thus, General Hickey's administrative and logistical operations are of considerable scope. For example, Army owned real estate in the area comprises approximately 900,000 acres, somewhat larger than the State of Rhode Island. Building space is over 75,000,000 square feet, equivalent of 24 Empire State Buildings. Paved roads, runways, and surfaced areas are the equivalent of a four-lane highway from Atlanta to Los Angeles. Army operated railroad tracks in the area total 107 miles.

Significantly the monthly payroll for uniformed personnel averages $30,000,000 and the civilian payroll $9,965,000.

With all its vast and far flung activities, Third Army is a happy and well behaved military community. Church attendance is high (30,652 religious services in 1956) and crime rate low (Ft. Bragg, for example had a rate of 9.9 per cent per thousand while nearby Fayetteville had a rate of 31.7).

Army Navy Air Force Journal 11

COMMUNITY RELATIONS between the military and civilians in the area is excellent. General Hickey is sympathetic with the community and takes an active part in helping wherever he can. Understanding of the Army and its problems is further enhanced by frequent visits of civilian leaders, clubs and other groups to Third Army headquarters where its functions and responsibilities are carefully explained. Aiding in this task is a huge colored, translucent map of the area arrayed with various colored lights which flash on and off to illustrate localities and activities as the briefing officer mentions them. General Hickey calls this his "pin ball" machine, but there is no doubt as to the lasting impression it makes on audiences which see it in action.

The Third U. S. Army with its great complex of Regular and Reserve operational units, and the many schools, centers and boards within its area, is, in fact, a sprawling testing and development center for the Army of the future.

SEC'Y WILSON COULD BE HEADED for a new blast from the scientists as an aftermath of his decision to eliminate the office of Assistant SecDef for R&D and his news conference remarks this week regarding the difference between "directed research," which he favors, and "pure research," which he maintains should be financed somewhere else than from Pentagon funds. It's no secret, of course, that a number of leading scientists long have been concerned because recommendations of the Rockefeller Commission concerning increased use of scientists in high-level military planning have not been implemented. DEFENSE LEADERS testifying on the fiscal '58 budget will encounter close interrogation in Congress concerning R&D activities. Why, it will be asked, was the decision made by Mr. Wilson not to request an Assistant Secretary for R&D in the Army after it had been stated officially that this was desirable?

GUIDED MISSILE R&D, as well as production, may soon be put under more rigid supervision and control. Original plan drawn up by Ass't Defense Secretary Frank D. Newbury to consolidate R&D with his Engineering functions, also called for bringing the office of Eger V. Murphree (Guided Missiles Ass't to SecDef) within his scope. SecDef Wilson, never enthusiastic over research, wants more emphasis on development projects which lead to production. Increase in the number of missile projects from about 30 to 50 in a little more than a year is a trend which neither he nor his old co-worker Newbury appreciate.

ATOMIC SUPPORT COMMANDERS in the Army are expected to be two-star officers. When the pioneer unit, SETAF, was activated at Verona, Italy, it was placed under a brigadier general, John H. Michaelis, USA, now a major general as head of Army Legislative Liaison. His successor, Brig. Gen. Harvey Fischer, USA, was promoted to major general soon after taking over SETAF. Thus, while the Army will lose two major general spots as a result of the drop from 19 to 17 divisions, there will be a net gain, since plans call for six Atomic Support Commands.

TREASURY OFFICIALS don't want to comment on whether they will seek restoration of $8.2 million the House cut from the Coast Guard budget. The money was earmarked for long-range land-based planes to replace those "approaching marginal safety." The funds were denied because a requested report from the Coast Guard and Treasury Dept. (it was to have been submitted by 20 Dec. 1956) was not available in time for Appropriations hearings. The Coast Guard sent its report to the Treasury well before the Committee meetings. A Treasury spokesman contended it was not possible to get the work done before the Congressional hearings. "When you have completed work on the report," asked The Journal, "will you ask for restoration of the funds?" "Final decision depends on the report," was the reply. In the meantime, the Coast Guard continues to fly planes that soon will not be safe.

THE ARMY IS ASSIGNING a Missile Officer to each of its 21 Army Headquarters. Capt. Robert C. Long, USA, will fill this billet in the First U. S. Army at Governors Island, N.Y.

SOME CORDINER COMMITTEE MEMBERS reportedly are upset over the fact that pay adjustment recommendations were made known in considerable detail prior to the submittal of the official report to Sec'y Wilson. Concern is expressed that this cart before the horse procedure may jeopardize the pay bill's reception on Capitol Hill. A NUMBER OF CONGRESSMEN have asked the Pentagon for copies of the report during the past several weeks, when the plain fact is that the report has not yet been completed. What was made available was a staff study. Final conclusions of the Committee will vary little from the staff study, of course, but many fear that the edge has been taken off the report. SERVICE PEOPLE WILL BE HOPEFUL when SecDef Wilson talks about the Cordiner Report in detail during March that he will be more enthusiastic in calling for its quick enactment than was the case at his news conference this week.

THE NAVY LEAGUE IS TRYING AGAIN to win Congressional approval for the official designation of 27 Oct., which is Theodore Roosevelt's birthday, as Navy Day. The first celebration, sponsored by the League, was held in 1922 with President Harding's approval. SECDEF LOUIS JOHNSON TERMINATED participation by military personnel and units in individual Service days in 1949. The Navy League, however, continued the 27 Oct. celebrations, but on a greatly reduced scale. A bill has been introduced by Rep. Bob Wilson (R-Calif.), whose district includes the Navy town of San Diego, to designate 27 Oct. as Navy Day. Actually, the Navy has permitted its people to participate on a limited basis in Navy League birthday celebrations during the past two years, but would like authority to return to the "open house" activities of the past. Many men feel that this could be done without detracting from Armed Forces Day in May.

ARMY AVIATION will get an added lift this year. In celebrating the 50th anniversary of military airpower, the Air Force Association intends to give prominent attention to the role of the "parent service," the Army Air Corps. The anniversary celebration will be climaxed at the AFA convention in Washington in August. There's a good chance that an Army leader will be invited to address the convention.

DEVELOPMENT OF AN ANTI-MISSILE MISSILE is not going as rapidly as some military men—particularly Army leaders—would like. The Army had hoped that SecDef Wilson's "roles and missions" statement of last November, which restrained the Army to a 200 mile missile range limit but authorized "feasibility studies" for greater distances, might provide adequate leeway for pushing the anti-missile missile effort. However, the word at the Pentagon is that the Army is being held closely to the 200 mile mark. Beyond that, Army missile experts were disheartened this week with Mr. Wilson's announcement that Jupiter has been abandoned. THE ARMY HAD HOPED to continue work on Jupiter, was convinced that it would show up well in comparison with the Air Force's ICBM Thor and that perhaps the Army would be allowed to produce the 1500 mile missile weapon for the Air Force. That hope now appears to have been shot down.

WATCH FOR MORE STAR ATHLETES to take advantage of the plan which now permits men up to the age of 25 to sign up for six months active duty training and fulfill the remainder of their obligation by 5½ years in the Reserve. Thus, a baseball or football player could enlist after one season and complete his active service before the start of the next.

Approve General Booth

The Senate has confirmed President Eisenhower's nomination of Maj. Gen. Donald P. Booth, USA, for three-star rank as Army Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel.

General Booth succeeded Lt. Gen. Walter L. Weible, USA, whose three-star rank on the retired list also was confirmed by the Senate. General Weible is now Executive Vice President of the Association of the United States Army.

The Senate also confirmed the nominations for three-star rank on the retired list of Lieutenant Generals William K. Harrison, Jr., and Ralph J. Canine.

SERVICE FAMILY NOTES

ON 4 March, at the Officers' Club, Ft. McNair, the Armed Forces Hostess Association will cut its birthday cake, celebrating its eight years of volunteer service to Armed Forces families all over the world. Honor guests at the luncheon will be Mesdames Charles E. Wilson, Wilber M. Brucker, Charles S. Thomas and Donald A. Quarles. The String Trio of the Army Band will provide background music during the luncheon, which will be followed by a program presented by the U. S. Army Chorus.

A group of volunteer wives from all branches of the Armed Forces, the Hostess Association has a two-fold plan of service to military families: first, to welcome newcomers to the Washington area through personal calls by neighborhood hostesses; and second, to staff its office at 1B879, the Pentagon, where files are maintained on every phase of Service life in the States and overseas.

Invitations have been mailed to 1,000 newly-arrived Service wives to join the birthday celebration and become better acquainted with their new neighbors.

Honor Mrs. Feldman and Mrs. Meade—

The "Sea Chanters" of the U. S. Navy Band will sing for the Engineer Officers' Wives Club of Washington, when they meet for luncheon at the Ft. McNair Officers' Club, on Tuesday, 5 March, at 12:30 p.m.

Honor guests will be the president of the Soldiers, Sailors, Marines and Airmen's Club, Mrs. Herman Feldman, wife of the former Quartermaster General of the Army; and Mrs. Robert H. Meade, wife of the Chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, of the Navy.

Mrs. Emerson C. Itschner, wife of the Army's Chief of Engineers, will head the receiving line, which will include Mesdames Feldman, Meade, Earle B. Butler, president of the group, and John E. Brewer, luncheon chairman.

The nominating committee, with Mrs. John U. Allen as chairman, will present its slate of officers for the next season and will call for nominations from the floor, in preparation for the elections in April. Assisting Mrs. Allen on this committee are Mesdames Itschner, Butler, Howard W. Penney, Ivan C. Rumsey and Harry E. Skinner.

Serving with Mrs. Brewer on the group in charge of arrangements for the luncheon are Mesdames Frank G. Hubbard, John A. Morrison, Cecil H. Fuller, Richard J. Ducote, Howard McCann and James J. Hawkins, Jr.

Reservations may be made with Mrs. Edmund K. Daley, 1110 N. Lexington St., Arlington, Va., before noon of 2 March.

Take Pacific Cruise—

Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Wayne R. Allen of 333 So. Glebe Rd., Arlington, Va., and Mrs. Constance Mills of 632 E. Micheltorens St., Santa Barbara, Calif., will leave on 10 April aboard the USS President Wilson for a Pacific cruise, which will include ports of call in Hawaii, Japan, the Philippines and Hong Kong.

MRS. RICHARD JACKSON (standing) stops to chat with Mrs. William J. E. Keish, wife of Fort Crowder's new Commanding Officer, and Mrs. John S. McKelly, President of the Fort Crowder Officers' Wives Club, at a recent meeting.

AFOWC'S Annual Benefit Show—

"What to wear" will be solved for members of the Air Force Officers' Wives Club and their friends, when they meet on Thursday, 7 March, in the Presidential Ballroom of the Statler Hotel, at 11:30 a.m., for their annual benefit fashion show luncheon, the primary purpose of which is the expansion of the Club's welfare fund.

One of Washington's leading stores will present the latest for small and large budgets, in small and not-so-small sizes, for tennis, golf, luncheon, tea, cocktail, dinner and that gala ball, all by famous American designers. There will also be door prizes as an added attraction.

Mrs. E. C. Klein is the capable chairman of the hard working committee in charge of the affair, which will assure great fun for members and their guests, while the Club welfare fund will be growing to support their widespread welfare projects.

AFIP Wives Meet—

The Wives Club of the Armed Forces Institute of Pathology met for sherry and luncheon, on 20 Feb., at the Walter Reed Army Medical Center Officers' Club, initiating the Club's new plan to meet each month, rather than every two months as the organization has in the past.

New officers of the group include Mesdames Ernest W. Goodpasture, president; Milton J. Knapp, secretary; and Nelson D. Large, treasurer.

Chaplains' Wives—

The March meeting of the Chaplains Wives Club of the Washington area will be a luncheon held at 12:30 p.m., at the Walter Reed Officers' Club, on Tuesday, 5 March.

The afternoon program for members and their guests will be presented by one of Washington's well-known stores, and hostesses for the affair will include Mesdames F. A. McKnight, R. E. Bareiss, J. G. Lambride and H. D. Shoemaker.

Woman's MSC Club to Have Fashion Show—

The 6 March luncheon of the Army Medical Service Woman's Club will feature a fashion show, "The Capitol Look," presented by a Washington, D. C., department store and moderated by the store's fashion coordinator.

Guests of honor at the 12:30 event at Walter Reed Army Medical Center's Officers Club will be Mrs. Wilber Brucker, wife of the Secretary of the Army; Mrs. Howard McC. Snyder, wife of the personal physician to President Eisenhower; Mrs. Silas B. Hays, wife of the Surgeon General of the Army, and Mrs. James B. Cooney, wife of the Deputy Surgeon General.

Hostesses for the spring style show will be wives of the Chiefs of the Professional Services of Walter Reed Army Hospital.

Miss Corgan Is Honored—

Catherine Ann Corgan is one of the thirteen Marygrove College students who will be listed in the 1957 edition of "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges," it is announced by Sister M. Amadeus, I.H.M., Dean. A senior at the Detroit, Mich., College, Miss Corgan is the daughter of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Francis H. Corgan, 2902 Hickory, Alexandria, Va.

DAR Honors Adm. Heffernan—

At a special meeting to be held on 5 March at the Truxtun-Decatur Naval Museum, Washington, D. C., the Continental Dames Chapter, D. C., of the Daughters of the American Revolution will present the DAR Award of Merit to Adm. John B. Heffernan, USN-Ret.

Admiral Heffernan served from 1946 to 1956 as Director of Naval History for the United States Navy and at present is Vice President and Secretary of the Naval Historical Foundation which operates the Truxtun-Decatur Museum.

The DAR Award will be presented in behalf of Continental Dames Chapter by the Regent, Mrs. Adalbert W. Weisbrod, assisted by Mrs. John Morrison Kerr, the Chapter's National Defense Chairman. The citation which accompanies the award reads: "... This Award of Merit is presented to Admiral Heffernan in appreciation of his service as Director of Naval History for the United States Navy, and for his valuable assistance in planning, establishing and maintaining the Truxtun-Decatur Museum, Washington, D. C., which provides this community with distinguished patriotic and educational programs and exhibits."

After the presentation Admiral Heffernan will address the Chapter on the educational and inspirational aims of the Naval Historical Foundation and the Museum.

MISS JUNA FINCHER, daughter of LT. COL. and MRS. JOE L. FINCHER, Hq. 1st FA Obsn Bn, APO 358, San Francisco, Calif., who is a student at Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn, Ala., has been chosen "Dream Girl of Theta Chi" by the fraternity's members. . . .

McCormick Trust Beneficiaries

Qualified beneficiaries of the $10,000 bequest recently left for widows and orphans of deceased former members of the Regular Army from Illinois or of the 1st Infantry Division are invited to contact Miss Julia Fieberger for additional details of the legislation. Miss Fieberger, who is the Chairman of Relief for the Army Relief Society, can be contacted at 2311 Connecticut Avenue, N. W., Washington, D. C. Her telephone number is North 7-0448. The bequest is being administered by the Trustees of the estate of the late Col. Robert R. McCormick.

Service Weddings and Engagements

WOODY-MEDARIS—Maj. Gen. (USA) and Mrs. John Bruce Medaris of Huntsville, Ala., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Marta Virginia, to Capt. Charles Kenyon Woody, USA, son of Col. and Mrs. Kenyon Woody of El Paso Tex.

Daughter of the Commander of the Army Ballistic Missile Agency, Miss Medaris attended the American School in Buenos Aires, Argentina, was graduated from the Washington, D. C. School for Secretaries and from the Capital City School of Nursing. She is now on the staff of the Redstone Arsenal Post Hospital. Her fiancé, who is a graduate of Virginia Polytechnic Institute, received his M.A. degree in Mechanical Engineering at the University of Southwestern California.

A June wedding is planned.

Six Month Accord

From first page—

dle of October will continue to be draft-eligible after completing the training. They also will be required to continue active participation in Guard units until they reach the age of 28.

Those who enter the six-months training program will not thereafter be draft-eligible, and they will be required to participate actively in the Guard or Reserve for only three years after completing their active duty. They then will be transferred to the Standby Reserve.

Congressman Brooks said the program "can well be considered a basis upon which a new era of good will and understanding between the National Guard and the United States Army will begin, and in the future may be considered as a cornerstone of support for the strongest and most active establishment the Army has been able to maintain in this country in peacetime."

The agreement assures the Guard that its strength will not decrease below 400,000 through 30 June 1958. And that the strength will be maintained thereafter as determined by Congressional appropriations.

Here is the way the entire plan will work:

Until 1 January 1958, persons between the ages of 17 and 18½ may enlist in the National Guard for 11 weeks of active duty training. Upon completion of the training, they will be required to participate actively in National Guard (Ready Reserve) units until they reach the age of 28. Men entering the 11-weeks training program must have enlisted in the program on a date sufficiently prior to 1 January 1958 to insure completion of 11 weeks of training by that date.

Persons within the age group 17 to 18½ who voluntarily perform six consecutive months active duty training will thereafter be required to participate actively for only three years in the National Guard (Ready Reserve). At the end of that period they may be transferred to the Standby Reserve for the remaining 4½ years of their eight-year obligation. However, these young men may remain in the National Guard, if acceptable, and if they volunteer to do so.

Beginning 1 January 1958, all persons enlisting in the National Guard between 17 and 18½ will be required to perform six months of active duty for training, and the 11 weeks active duty training course will be discontinued. Six-months trainees will be required to serve only three years in the Ready Reserve and 4½ years in the Standby Reserve.

Persons between the ages 18½ through 25 entering the National Guard will be required to perform six months of active duty training to be followed by 5½ years active participation in the National Guard (Ready Reserve).

Persons in a deferred status, age 26 and over, who possess qualifications in a technical or scarce MOS, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Army, and members of the Alaska Scouts will not be required to enter the six-months active duty training program upon enlistment in the National Guard but may volunteer to do so.

The size of the Army National Guard shall be maintained at an authorized strength of approximately 400,000 for the remainder of FY 1957 and FY 1958, and thereafter at such greater or lesser strength as may be determined in annual appropriations of the Congress, and every means will be used to maintain the Guard at approximately the determined figure. The Army will provide sufficient spaces in the six months training program to allow the National Guard to reach this figure, taking into consideration the input into the Guard from other programs.

Persons enlisting while satisfactorily pursuing a full time course of high school instruction may have their active duty for training deferred for a period of not more than one year in order not to interrupt their high school course of instruction; provided, that persons enlisting for 11 weeks of active duty for training may be deferred from entrance on such active duty for training until their graduation; provided, they will complete their active duty for training prior to 1 January, 1958.

In order to insure that the proper strength of the Guard will be maintained, recruiting for all of the various categories of personnel will be continued at the highest possible levels.

In addition, prior-service personnel will not be assigned to Army Reserve units for at least 60 days after they leave active duty in order to give the Guard every opportunity to recruit them for Guard units.

Recruitment for the Army National Guard will be accomplished by the Regular Army Recruiting Service on the same basis as recruitment for the active establishment and the Army Reserve.

If all of these steps should fail to provide the necessary numbers of trained men for Reserve and Guard units, the Army will initiate early releases for active duty soldiers to fill the ranks of the Army Reserve and National Guard.

Honored At Career End

Six officers of the Military District of Washington, each of whom have completed more than 20 years service, retired 28 Feb. They are:

Obituaries

Lt. Gen. Hubert Reilly Harmon, USAF-Ret.

Funeral services were conducted 25 Feb., at the Randolph AFB, Tex. Chapel, for Lt. Gen. Hubert Reilly Harmon, USAF-Ret, who died at the Base Hospital, Lackland AFB, Tex., on 22 Feb., following a long illness. He was 64 years old. Following cremation, his ashes will be flown to Colorado Springs, Colo., and burial will be at the permanent site of the U. S. Air Force Academy, in the late Spring or early Summer. Memorial services were also held on 26 Feb., in the Cadet Theater of the temporary Air Force Academy.

Born at Chester, Pa., the son of an Army officer, who was at that time Commandant of Cadets at the Pennsylvania Military Academy, General Harmon was graduated from the U. S. Military Academy in 1915, where he was a classmate of President Eisenhower. Having served in France and Germany in WWI, during WWII, General Harmon commanded the Gulf Coast Air Training Center at Randolph AFB, the Sixth Air Force in the Caribbean, the Thirteenth Air Force in the South Pacific and served as Deputy Commander, Aircraft, in the South Pacific. Following the war, General Harmon was Air Force Representative on the U. N. Military Staff Committee; a U. S. Delegate to the Inter-American Defense Board; from 1947 to 1953, was Special Assistant to the Air Force Chief of Staff for Air Force Academy matters; and was then named the Academy's first Superintendent. Since relinquishing that post last July to Maj. Gen. James E. Briggs, USAF, because of ill health, General and Mrs. Harmon had returned to their home in San Antonio, Tex.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Rosa-Maye Kendrick Harmon; one daughter, Miss Eula Harmon of San Antonio; and one son, Cadet Kendrick Harmon, USMA '57.

Brig. Gen. Hans Kramer, USA-Ret

Funeral services were held at the Golden Gate National Cemetery, San Bruno, Calif., on 18 Feb., for Brig. Gen. Hans Kramer, USA-Ret, who died at Letterman Army Hospital, Presidio of San Francisco, on 16 February.

A native of Germany, General Kramer was commissioned in the Corps of Engineers, upon his graduation from the U. S. Military Academy in 1918. In the early 1920's he was assigned to the California Institute of Technology as an ROTC instructor and later served with troops in Panama. His career included such duty as work on the lower Mississippi River, heading construction of the Conchas Dam in New Mexico, and in 1942, General Kramer was named Theater Engineer for the Central Pacific. Retired from active duty in 1946 for physical disability, General Kramer settled in San Mateo, Calif., and opened an office in San Francisco, as a consulting engineer. He was a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers and the Society of American Military Engineers.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Alice Kramer; and one son, Mr. Hans H. Kramer.

Col. Irwin S. Dierking, USA-Ret.

Military rites and burial at the Zachary Taylor National Cemetery, Houston, Tex., were conducted on 22 Feb. for Col. Irwin S. Dierking, USA-Ret., who died in Houston at the age of 62.

Colonel Dierking, who was born in Jeffersonville, Ind., was graduated from the University of Indiana. He was commissioned a second lieutenant of Infantry in 1917 and served in France during WW I. He transferred to the Quartermaster Corps following the War and served in Hawaii from 1930-35, in Europe during WW II and in the European Occupation. He was retired in October 1952 at Presidio of San Francisco and had resided in Houston since.

Survivors include his widow, Mrs. Frieda Dierking of Houston; a son, Mr. Irwin S. Dierking, jr, of Houston, and three daughters, Mrs. Thomas T. Currie, Houston; Mrs. Roy M. Taylor, Henderson, Ky., and Mrs. James A. Butler, Ft. Belvoir, Va.

Mrs. Mary Travette Burger

Mrs. Mary Travette Burger, 53, wife of Brig. Gen. Vonna F. Burger, USA, died at Walter Reed Army Hospital 25 Feb. of a cerebral hemorrhage. She was air evacuated to Walter Reed on 24 Feb., from Okinawa, where she had been hospitalized since mid-January.

Mrs. Burger was born in Lawton, Okla. on 24 Sept. 1903. After receiving a Bachelor of Arts degree in 1926 from the University of Oklahoma, she continued with graduate study at Columbia University and UCLA. Until her marriage to General Burger in 1934, she taught English literature at the Lawton High School.

As an Army wife, Mrs. Burger traveled throughout the United States and Europe. Her last stateside home was Ft. Hood, Tex., where her husband served as Artillery Commander of the First Armored Division from 1953-55. In August 1955 she accompanied General Burger to Okinawa where he assumed his present duties as United States Civil Administrator of the Ryukyus Islands.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Burger is survived by her mother, Mrs. T. H. Westbrook, of Lawton, Okla. Funeral services will be held in Lawton.

INDUSTRY IN DEFENSE

NAVY P5M MARTIN MARLIN comes out of the water as the stern of the LSD USS Ashland rises. The beaching gear of the P5M balances the ship while seamen complete the tiedown in this demonstration of how a multi-engine seaplane could be serviced and its crew rested at sea without need of land based facilities.

Navy LSD Demonstrates Seaplanes' Independence Of Land-Based Facilities

The Navy's concept of mobile seaplane striking forces was given a practical demonstration when a Navy LSD (Land-Ship Dock) riding at anchor in Chesapeake Bay took aboard a Navy P5M Martin Marlin in a recent exercise to show this new technique to Martin engineers and Navy officers from Baltimore and Washington.

Although the demonstration involved the P5M, a twin-engined anti-submarine warfare seaplane, techniques developed can be used as a basis for future operations involving the Navy P6M Martin SeaMaster, a 600-plus mile per hour multi-jet seaplane.

The drydocking operation began shortly before noon on 18 Feb., when a P5M from Patrol Squadron VP-56, based at Norfolk Naval Air Station and piloted by Lt. (jg) Ed. Carney, rendezvoused with the USS Ashland about a mile and a half off Maryland's Eastern Shore. The Martin Marlin landed near the stern of the LSD and taxied to within 150 feet of the ship. A towline from the Ashland was quickly attached to the bow line of the Marlin by seamen stationed in a launch and the P5M was towed toward the open stern of the ship.

Under the command of Cdr. F. W.

Brown, Jr., the Ashland had already ballasted down to a depth of 13 feet, leaving only some 4 feet of freeboard at the extreme stern. As the P5M approached the submerged stern ramp, the ship's crew, under the direction of the Executive Officer, Cdr. E. E. Bracken, and the Air Officer, LCDR. D. E. Brunner, passed guide lines to the bow and tail of the seaplane and floated the beaching gear out to the plane's crew. When the gear was properly attached, the 63,000 lb. Marlin was hauled aboard the LSD.

Although not a speed test, the entire operation took but 26 minutes from the time the retrieving began until the tail gate of LSD closed on the Marlin.

Aboard the Ashland, the 99 ft. long Marlin set high on a raised deck so that its gull-wings would clear the stern deck of the ship. About 35 ft. of each wing, from the engine nacelle to the wing tip, extended beyond the sides of the Ashland.

In actual operation, the drydocked P5M could be repaired or overhauled as required while the seaplane crew relaxed aboard the LSD and at the completion of the servicing the Martin Marlin could be returned to the sea and air without need of land based facilities.

Price Negotiation Policies In New Text

Specific policies and techniques relating to price negotiation with contractors of the Department of Defense are included for the first time in a new section of the Armed Services Procurement Regulations, the text of which will be published shortly in the ASPR and the Federal Register.

The new section (Revision 19 to the 1955 edition of ASPR) which is applicable to all types of negotiated contracts and certain subcontracts, was announced by Perkins McGuire, Assistant Secretary of Defense (Supply and Logistics).

It includes procedures and techniques to be used in connection with negotiation; guidance as to relationship between cost, profit and price; factors influencing the amount of profit in contracts including subcontracting; and other subjects relating to negotiation.

Mr. McGuire said that it should do much to insure uniformity within the military departments in the conduct of negotiated procurement.

Basic policy of the Department of Defense, as restated in the new part, is to procure supplies and services from responsible sources at fair and reasonable prices calculated to result in the lowest ultimate over-all cost to the Government.

Copies of the regulation (Revision No. 19 to the Armed Services Procurement Regulation) will be offered for sale by the Superintendent of Documents, U. S. Government Printing Office, Washington 25, D. C.

U. S. COAST GUARD

Commandant—Vice Adm. Alfred C. Richmond
Secretary of The Treasury—George M. Humphrey

COAST GUARD Headquarters has promoted 12 officers for temporary service, including one to commander, five to lieutenant commander, two to lieutenant and four to lieutenant (jg).

All were given dates of rank from 13 February with the exception of the three Reserve officers named to the rank of lieutenant (jg). Their ranks date from 10 Dec. 1956.

Those named are:

TO COMMANDER
Burneson, Raphael C
TO LIEUTENANT COMMANDER
Hanson, M S, Jr	Payne, Ernest W
Roberge, T L	Mattson, Axel R
Varger, Nathan
TO LIEUTENANT
McIntosh, D F, Jr	Parsons, Glenn N
TO LIEUTENANT (JG)
Woods, Jimmie D	Stevens, D A (R)

Promotion Exam Results

An analysis of the 14 January series of officer promotion examinations shows that 24 of 1,127 participants failed to make passing grades.

The chief stumbling blocks in the path of advancement were Marine Navigation, Part II, and Communications. Five of 81 officers, or 6.2 per cent, flunked the Communications test, while five of 90, 5.5 per cent, failed to make the grade in Marine Navigation, Part II.

On the same date, three of 39 officers were put permanently out of line for promotion when they failed re-examination. The flunk percentage is 7.7. One failure was recorded in each of the following subjects: Military Justice, Naval Electronics, and Ordnance and Gunnery.

There were no below average grades made by officers who took tests in special duty subjects.

The next series of tests will be conducted on 13 May.

Skyraider Production

Halts After 12 Years

Twelve years of continuous production of the "world's most powerful single engine, propeller-driven airplane" came to a halt 18 Feb. as Douglas Aircraft Company's El Segundo division delivered the last of 3,180 AD Skyraiders to the Navy.

Simultaneously, company officials announced that a speedy jet bomber, the bantam A4D Skyhawk, is taking the AD's place with the fleet.

First flown on 18 March 1945, the Skyraider holds the international load-carrying record for aircraft with one reciprocating engine.

The midjet A4D, which holds the official world speed record of 695.163 miles per hour over the 500-kilometer closed course, is America's smallest jet combat airplane and is designed for a variety of missions, including atomic bombing.

THE FINAL SKYRAIDER, an AD-7 model, was turned over to the Navy by T. E. Springer, vice president-general manager of the Douglas El Segundo division, and E. H. Heinemann, division chief engineer, during informal ceremonies recently at Los Angeles International Airport.

Accepting the milestone model were RADM. John B. Pearson, jr., USN, Bureau of Aeronautics general representative for the western district, and Cdr. R. J. Thompson, assistant BuAer representative at Douglas.

Navy Reveals Automatic All-Weather Landing System; Carrier Tests Soon

NIAGARA FALLS AIRPORT
BUFFALO, NEW YORK

A COMPLETELY automatic ground controlled landing system, seven years in development, was publicly demonstrated here 27 Feb. for the first time.

Before an audience of Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps officers, and newsmen, Douglas F3D "Skyknights" repeatedly were picked up by the system's radar and brought in to safe landings independent of the pilot.

Although designed primarily for Navy carriers, the system developed by Bell Aircraft Corporation is applicable to all types of landings. The Air Force, a participant in the development contract, is considering its installation at air bases, and the Army also is interested.

More than 1200 landings, some under zero-zero visibility, already have demonstrated the practicability of the system. Some of these tests were made here by the Bell Company, some were made by the Navy at Patuxent Naval Air Station, Md., and others by the Air Force at its Rome Air Development Center, Griffis AFB, N. Y.

Next summer, the ACLS (Automatic Carrier Landing System) will be installed aboard a Navy carrier for extended tests at sea. For such carrier operations, the system is completely compatible with the Mirror Landing System, permitting pilots to monitor their approach and switch at any time from automatic to manual control.

FOR SHORE-BASED OPERATIONS, the system is highly mobile. It can be transported in a small trailer or in a DC-3 type airplane. In operation, the device picks up approaching aircraft at up to 30,000 feet and five miles away. When the radio-radar connection has been established, the pilot merely pushes a button and automatic ground control takes over. From that point on, the device

Journal Goes Electronic

To give better and faster service to our readers throughout the world, THE JOURNAL is going electronic!

We are converting from an old conventional addressing and mailing system that takes two-and-a-half days to complete our subscribers' list, to an ultra-modern electronic system that does the entire job in a few hours. When the transition is completed we will be able to get all of our copies off to our readers more efficiently than ever before.

But—like all modernization this shift takes time. During the transition we are operating under a double work-load. Copies to some subscribers could be delayed. If yours happens to be one of these, won't you please bear with us for a few weeks until the transition is completed? Then your service will be better than ever before. Thanks.

To MAAG Madrid

Lt. Col. Robert S. Kramer, USA, Assistant Army District Engineer in Mobile, Ala., has been ordered to serve as an Engineer Staff member of the U. S. Military Assistance Advisory Group in Madrid, Spain.

During his assignment to Army Engineer headquarters in Mobile, Colonel and Mrs. Kramer and their three children have lived at 2771 North Sherwood Drive. His family will accompany him to Madrid.

President Names Army Lt's

President Eisenhower has nominated 901 Regular Army second lieutenants for promotion to first lieutenant.

The list, which went to the Senate on 27 February, includes 882 line officers, four in the Women's Army Corps, 13 in the Medical Service Corps and two in the Army Nurse Corps.

operates the aircraft, bringing it into the landing pattern, controlling its approach and making the actual contact with the runway or carrier deck.

An electronic computer sends the necessary corrections to a device aboard the plane, directing the aircraft into the desired flight path. If the plane is not the best attitude for a safe landing, ACLS automatically sends it around for another attempt.

Cdr. A. G. Russell, USN, Assistant Head for All-Weather Matters in the Office of the Chief of Naval Operations, has been named to conduct the sea trials, expected to take about four months.

Navy pilots who participated in the tests here included Commander Russell, Cdr. J. Ramage, USN, and LCDr. S. Morris, USN. Types of planes which have been landed by the Bell system include the Douglas F3D, North American F-86, Convair 340, Cessna 310, Douglas DC-3, thus demonstrating its applicability to planes used by all the Services, as well as commercial and business types.

During one part of the land-based phase of the tests, Commander Russell was successfully guided through four actual blind landings in a heavy snowstorm at the airport here, adjacent to Bells main plant.

No other airplanes in the area were able to take off or land because of the restricted visibility which was less than one eighth of a mile.

THE NAVY POINTS OUT that the system could also be used to land pilots who are either wounded or overly tired after flying long missions.

Bell engineers feel that not only does ACLS have obvious military and civil landing applications, but that, combined with a crosscountry navigational system, it would make completely automatic flight possible under all conditions of weather.

Pay Bill Fate

weeks at the most, and I haven't actually got the final report.

"I think there is a great deal of good in the report and its recommendations," Mr. Wilson continued, "but we haven't actually come into agreement in the Defense Department among ourselves on what is the right and best thing to do and when we can do, and that is going to be given some real serious consideration in the next few weeks."

THE JOURNAL has stated in previous reports that at the present time it does not seem likely that Congress, at best, would complete action on a new military pay plan before the end of the session, and that an effective date could well be delayed until October, or later. This, of course, would mean a considerable savings and would make possible financing the pay adjustment scheme out of the $38 billion military budget request for fiscal year 1958.

At its concluding session, the Cordiner Committee is known to have received strong pressure from some Service spokesmen to modify its stand with regard to abolishing longevity pay credit, particularly insofar as it concerns the service of enlisted men who are commissioned.

Authoritative word is, however, that Chairman Ralph J. Cordiner and his associates intend to stick by their guns, barring a last minute change of mind, and will advocate the end of longevity credit.

The Committee intends to take the position that all officers of the same rank and service in grade should receive identical pay, no matter how they reached that rank. If the Committee holds to this position, there is some reason to believe, however, that the Defense Department or Congress will modify this recommendation to give pay credit for some enlisted service.

As was reported last week, the final report of the Cordiner Committee, now being readied for Mr. Wilson, will be between 30,000 and 40,000 words, with a number of illustrative charts and tables.

Presumably, the Cordiner Committee will be called to Washington to make the official presentation to Secretary Wilson.

In addition to Mr. Wilson's comments regarding the lack of decision as to when the pay plan can be pushed, another factor must be considered in speculating on its future. This is the absence of an Assistant Secretary of Defense for Manpower, Personnel and Reserve Forces.

Mr. Carter L. Burgess, now President of Trans World Airlines, left the Pentagon on 1 February. He is Vice Chairman of the Cordiner Committee.

Mr. Mansfield Sprague, who had been General Counsel, was named to succeed Colonel Burgess.

However, the President subsequently designated Mr. Sprague to replace Mr. Gordon Gray as Assistant Secretary of Defense for International Security Affairs, with former Secretary of the Army Gray becoming Director of the Office of Defense Mobilization.

Secretary Wilson indicated this week that a replacement for Mr. Burgess and Mr. Sprague in the top manpower post will be announced within the next two weeks. When that official is named, some time will be required to brief him on all current personnel matters, including, of course, the pay situation.

Thus, at the start of March, Service families would be well advised not to count on spending any money recommended in the Cordiner Committee pay plan for some months to come, at least.

It appears more and more certain that the Services will need to demonstrate that implementation of the Cordiner recommendations can lead to substantial savings in manpower and money before the pay adjustment bill will be given enthusiastic support by Administration officials and leaders on Capitol Hill. They are prepared to do just that.

Two Cavalry Regiments Join "Pentomic" Army

The 16th and the 17th Cavalry Regiments will be retained in the "Pentomic" Army as parent organizations of new "SkyCav" units.

The addition of the two historical units brings to a total of 164 the number of regiments whose battle honors will be carried by modern infantry, artillery and armor units under the Combat Arms Regimental System.

"Sky Cavalry" squadrons of the 16th Cavalry will be assigned to nondivisional forces while airborne reconnaissance troops of the 17th Cavalry will become part of "Pentomic" airborne divisions, the Army said.

The 162 regiments previously announced by the Army include the 1st through the 15th Cavalry Regiments. Together with the 16th and 17th Cavalry, organized in 1916, they comprise all of the historic Cavalry regiments on the Army's roster.

No new Cavalry units were formed after 1916. Following WWI, the Army added Tank and Armored regiments, and in 1950 the Armor Branch was established as a continuation of the Cavalry arm.

Hercules Missile Strengthens Defense

The air defenses of the Nation will be strengthened by an improved version of the Nike, called Hercules, which has a nuclear capability.

The Pentagon said this week that Hercules has "many times the destructive power" of the original Nike.

It is undergoing final tests.

Known as Nike B during its development stage, Nike Hercules is substantially faster and has a much greater range than Nike Ajax which has guarded key cities and strategic areas of the nation for the past three years. "It is expected that the new missile will be in the hands of operational Nike batteries around the country in the relatively near future," the Pentagon reported.

Although longer, heavier and more than double the diameter of Nike Ajax, the Hercules model will have "extreme maneuverability at altitudes far in excess of those capable of being reached by Ajax. Its higher velocity will permit swifter interception of the most advanced types of aircraft and its increased lethality will make Nike Hercules one of the most effective weapons in America's defense arsenal," according to the Defense Department.

Certain modifications in existing ground control equipment makes it possible for Nike Hercules to be integrated into existing Nike batteries throughout the nation. Both Nike Ajax and Nike Hercules can then be fired with the same system. The equipment changes also add to the effectiveness of the Nike Ajax.

Western Electric Company is prime contractor for Nike Hercules.

Research and development studies were begun on the improved version of Nike in 1953 by the same Army-industry team which assumed responsibility for the original Nike missile. This included the U. S. Army Ordnance Corps, Bell Telephone Laboratories, Western Electric Company and Douglas Aircraft Company.

The ground guidance and control equipment and missile guidance are being manufactured by the Western Electric Company at its Burlington and Winston-Salem plants in North Carolina, while Hercules missiles will be produced initially at the Douglas Aircraft Santa Monica plant and followed with additional production at the Douglas-operated Charlotte Ordnance Missile Plant at Charlotte, N. C. Components of the associated launching equipment, also, are the responsibility of Douglas.

The first prototype production model of ground equipment has been released for testing at the Army's White Sands Proving Ground in New Mexico.

Cordiner Reports On GE Employees' Share Of "Better Living" Program

Employee earnings and benefits during 1956 reached an all-time high under General Electric Company's "Better Living" program, President Ralph J. Cordiner, who is also chairman of the Defense Department's Pay Board, revealed last week.

Wages and benefits which accrued to 280,407 General Electric employees during the year totalled $1,643,818,495. Under the "Better Living" program established by the company, more than 52,000 employees and former employees also shared in corporate earnings as owners of common stock under GE's stock bonus plan. Dividends were accumulated for an additional 77,000 who are in the process of becoming share owners.

This occurred during a calendar year when GE reached a record sales peak, topping for the first time the $4-billion mark. The company also set records in corporate and employee earnings, in payments to suppliers, in dividends to share owners and in expansion of facilities to meet future markets.

Sales in 1956 totaled $4,090,015,685, 18 per cent above 1955 sales of $3,463,734,419. Earnings reached a record $213,756,849, a two per cent increase over 1955 earnings of $208,908,054. The 1956 earnings were equivalent to $2.46 a share or 5.2 cents per dollar of sales as compared to $2.41 a share and 6.0 cents per dollar of sales in 1955.

Dividends paid during 1956 totaled $2 a share and involved a record payout of $172,215,845. This compares with dividend payments of $1.60 a share and distribution of $137,189,002 in 1955. The number of share owners increased by 18,680 during 1956 to a record level of 366,524 at the end of the year. This total does not include an estimated 94,000 beneficial owners in the names of brokers or nominees of banks and trust companies.

Purchases of materials, supplies and services from General Electric's more than 42,000 suppliers reached a peak of $1,992,715,548, 48 per cent of each sales dollar. The Company also made provision for payment of $259,625,532 in direct federal, state, local and Canadian taxes and renegotiation, in addition to indirect taxes included in prices paid to suppliers.

Expenditures for expansion of facilities in 1956 amounted to $205,215,636, more than $34,000,000 higher than any previous year in the Company's history. This outlay was part of General Electric's continuing expansion and modernization program in which $1.4 billion has been invested since World War II.

Total net sales billed included two divergent trends. Sales of the Company's commercial product departments increased by 24 per cent over 1955, while defense product departments were showing a 6 per cent sales decline as anticipated. Over-all General Electric ended 1956 with the largest backlog of orders in its history.

Housing Ahead At 46 Bases

Almost five-thousand new family housing units are being constructed or planned at 46 military installations scattered throughout the United States.

Here is a round-up of the latest developments at numerous installations:

AIR PROVING GROUND COMMAND, EGLIN AFB, FLA.—First occupants of the new Hurlburt Field housing units are expected to occupy their quarters soon after 1 March, following formal acceptance of the first 74 units on 17 Feb. The two-, three- and four-bedroom dwellings are for officer occupancy. An additional 206 units for airmen will be completed in April and May.

FORT CAMPBELL, KY.—A plan is underway to construct 1500 housing units over the next four years. The public information office here says the program will help secure adequate housing for the many hundreds of military personnel who have not brought their families to Campbell because of lack of on-post housing or lack of community housing within their financial capabilities.

AIR DEFENSE COMMAND, ENT AFB, COLO.—Plans are being prepared for the construction of some 800 units of family housing at 38 Air Force stations within the ADC. A total of 121 houses will be constructed at AF stations located at Calumet and Saulte Saint Marie, Mich.; Benton, Pa.; Long Island, N. Y.; Cape Charles, Va.; Limestone, Me.; North Concord, Vt.; and Kure Beach, N. C. Another 198 houses will be built on nine sites at Eagle Pass, Zapata, Pyote, Ozona and Rockport, Tex.; Continental Divide, Tierra Amarilla, and Moriarity, N. M.; and Ajo, Ariz. In the Northwestern section of the country, 298 units will be constructed at 13 AF stations: Cottonwood, Idaho; Burns, North Bend, and Mount Hebo, Ore.; Neah Bay, Wash.; Wadena and Finland, Minn.; Cut Bank, Opheim and Miles City, Mont.; Fortuna and Finley, N. D.; and Gettysburg, S. D. In the Western part of the United States, 183 homes will be constructed at eight AF stations: Cambria, Boron, Requa and Point Arena, Calif.; Los Vegas, Winnemucca, Fallon and Tonopah, Nev.

FT. McPHERSON, GA.—Construction of 107 new family housing units will replace existing substandard housing here. Included in the building are 16 permanent-type family duplexes and 10 apartment buildings to cost slightly over 1.5 million dollars. None of the construction will increase on-post housing facilities. For every new housing unit built, the Fort will demolish or convert (to other uses) substandard living quarters which are now being used on a temporary basis.

FT. BENNING, GA.—Construction of 1,000 new housing units, costing $14 million, is underway here. The project, to be completed by the end of 1958, includes 248 units for officers and 752 for Non-Commissioned Officers.

L. G. HANSCOM FIELD, MASS.—Plans are being completed here for the construction of a multi-million dollar family housing center. Six hundred and seventy units will be erected on 180 acres of land in the town of Lincoln, adjacent to Hanscom Field, at a cost of about $11 million. Included in the construction is one house for a general officer, one for the Base Commander, two for colonels, 76 for majors and lieutenant colonels, 188 for junior officers and 402 for Non-Commissioned Officers and airmen grades.

HURLBURT AFB, FLA.—Plans are underway here for the construction of a master television antenna system for military family housing units on the base. The system will provide TV reception to a total of 280 housing units and will be capable of being extended to future additional additions.

SEWART AFB, TENN.—A $1.4 million Capehart project for 87-units will be completed here before next winter. Meanwhile, the base has announced that it will take over the 600-unit Stones River Homes housing project (a Wherry project) adjacent to the base by the end of the year. This is in keeping with the military housing law which provides that Wherry units must be purchased by the Armed Forces in areas where new Capehart housing is constructed.

FT. BUCKER, ALA.—Construction of the first 120 units of a 600-unit Capehart program is underway here. Thirty of the new units are two-bedroom units for Non-Commissioned Officers, 10 are three-bedroom units for Non-Commissioned Officers and 80 are three-bedroom units for officers. The 120 units will cost over $2 million. Thirty-one other homes will be built for senior and field grade officers.
